While holding that trades unions may cease to work, it was held in Erdman v. Mitchell, 207 Pa. St. 79, that their combination to prevent others from obtaining work by threats of a strike, or to prevent an employer from employing others by threats of a strike, is a combination for an unlawful purpose, although not now punishable by indictment, and cannot be classed as peaceable persuasion.

(e) Statutory Regulations. — See note 7.

206. See note 1.

Notice Must Be with Respect to Terminal Day. — See note 2.

Preceding Tenancy. — Mulligan v. Hollingsworth, 99 Fed. Rep. 216; Hately v. Myers, 96 Ill. App. 217; Ridgeway v. Hannum, 29 Ind. App. 124; Kennedy v. Iowa State Ins. Co., 119 Iowa 29; German State Bank v. Herron, 111 Iowa 25; Mason v. Howes, 122 Mich. 329 (covenant of lessor to repair); Moore v. Harter, 67 Ohio St. 250; King v. Wilson, 98 Va. 259.

The rule that, "when a tenant, with the consent of the landlord, express or implied, holds over his term, the law implies a continuation of the original tenancy upon the same terms and conditions," does not obtain, as regards rent, in a case where rent reserved in the original lease for the most part consists of the performance by the tenant of labor on the premises of such a nature that, being once performed during the original term, it becomes incapable of further performance by the tenant while holding over. Martin v. Hamersky, 63 Kan. 360.

200. 5. Notice of Change of Terms in Original Lease. — Moore v. Harter, 67 Ohio St. 250.

6. Moore v. Harter, 67 Ohio St. 250.

8. Tenancies from Year to Year — Half Year's Notice. — A lease of shooting privileges from year to year does not require six months' notice to quit to terminate tenancy. Lowe v. Adams, (1901) 2 Ch. 598.

204. 1. Sartwell v. Sowles, 72 Vt. 270, 82 Am. St. Rep. 943.

In Arkansas it has been held that in case of the tenancy of a store from year to year, a ten days' notice to quit was, as a matter of law, unreasonable and insufficient to terminate the tenancy. Bromley v. Aday, 70 Ark. 351.

8. Monthly Tenancy — Month's Notice. — Baker v. Kenney, 69 N. J. L. 180; Bent v. Renken, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 86 N. Y. Supp. 110; Burrows v. Mickelson, 14 Manitoba 739; Eastman v. Richard, 29 Can. Sup. Ct. 438.

Where a lease is for a definite time, reserving monthly payments of rent, the fact that for the convenience of the lessee the lessor permits him to pay quarterly in advance does not change the lease to a quarterly tenancy so as to require a quarter's notice to quit in order that the lessor may terminate the tenancy. London, etc., Bank v. Curtis, 27 Wash. 656.

205. 1. Notice Must Expire on Terminal Day. — Dixon v. Bradford, etc., Coal Supply Co., (1904) 1 K. B. 444, 73 L. J. K. B. 136; Baker v. Kenney, 69 N. J. L. 180.

The rule that the obligation of ordinary care on the part of the landlord does not extend to damage created by the tenants themselves, does not apply to the negligent obstruction by one tenant of the building of appurtenances used in common by the other tenants so as to prevent a recovery by the latter on the negligent failure of the landlord to remove obstructions placed by such other tenant. Wesener v. Smith, 89 N. Y. App. Div. 211.

Pennsylvania. — Lewin v. Pauli, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 447.

In O'Malley v. Twenty-Five Associates, 178 Mass. 555, the court adopted the rule that the liability of the tenant with regard to the repair and appurtenances used in common by several tenants of the building was only to keep them in the condition in which they were at the time of the letting. In this case the court disapproved the stricter rule laid down in Lynch v. Swan, 167 Mass. 510.

Negligent Maintenance of Elevator. — Bogendoerfer v. Jacobs, 97 N. Y. App. Div. 355.

Negligent Maintenance of Dumb-waiter. — Hirtenstein v. Farrell, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 34 Misc. (N. Y.) 515.

Leaders from Roof. — In Levine v. Baldwin, 87 N. Y. App. Div. 150, it was held that the pipes conveying the water from the roof to a sewer were in the nature of an appurtenance of demised premises which remained under the charge and control of the landlord for the benefit of the several tenants of the building, and that the landlord was therefore liable in damages to a tenant injured through the negligence of the landlord in keeping such pipes in repair.

Where the tenant before the renewal of a lease of the premises of which the tenant had been in occupation for about ten years objected to the condition of the banisters of the porches, but made no objection to the condition of the floors of the porches, the agreement of the landlord to fix the porch was restricted to fixing the banisters. Roberts v. Cottey, 100 Mo. App. 500.

Where in the case of a lease for a month the landlord agrees to put the premises in repair and fails to do so, his liability is restricted solely to a failure to repair for the term of the lease, and he incurs no liability by reason of his failure to repair as regards the subsequent periods due to the holding over of the tenant. Frederick v. Daniels, 74 Conn. 710.

5. A general covenant on the part of the landlord to put the premises into a habitable condition and make the same ready for occupancy by a certain time, qualified by the following phrase, "Meaning and intending hereby that the boards covering the windows and doors of the dwelling-house shall be removed by the said party of the first part, the fixtures connected with the plumbing, and the dwelling-house put in condition for occupancy," merely requires the landlord to make the specific repairs specified in such phrase. *Rubens v. 4. Rents to Accrue. — Michaels v. Fishel, 51 N. Y. App. Div. 274, 169 N. Y. 381.

A provision in a lease authorizing the lessor to relet and hold the lessee for any deficiency of rents, etc., is valid and renders the lessee liable after summary proceedings. Baylies v. Ingram, 84 N. Y. App. Div. 360.

A mere demand for overdue rent, and notice to quit, required as a preliminary to the institution of summary proceedings to oust a tenant, does not of itself terminate the lease and release the lessee from liability for subsequent rents, where the summary proceedings are abandoned. Woodworth v. Harding, 75 N. Y. App. Div. 54.

A provision in a lease authorizing a tenant to "resume possession" in certain cases, and relet the premises for the remainder of the term on the tenant's account, he to remain liable for any deficiency in the rent, renders the tenant liable for such deficiency where the landlord gained possession by summary proceedings. *Landesman v. Recovery of Possession. — The fact that the lease is illegal on grounds of public policy does not prevent the lessor from recovering possession after the termination of the lease. Sittel v. Wright, (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. Rep. 434.

A lease taken for the purpose of using the premises for an illegal purpose is void and the lessor may recover possession before the expiration of the term demised, and the occupation by the tenant and payment of rent periodically will not enable him to claim any rights as a periodical tenant so as to entitle him to notice to quit. *Berni v. 7. Mules. — The lien does not cover a sum agreed to be paid by the tenant in case of the death of mules furnished to the tenant. Bush v. Willis, 130 Ala. 395.

353. 2. In Alabama the Balance Unpaid in Any Year. — Bush v. Willis, 130 Ala. 395, construing Civ. Code Ala. (1896), § 2705, following Cockburn v. Watkins, 76 Ala. 486.

4. Priority of Lien. — Neal v. Brandon, 70 Ark. 79; Perry v. Perry, 127 N. Car. 23 (mortgage of crop).

6. Advances by Third Persons. — The assignment by the landlord of the rents to accrue under a lease does not create the relation of landlord and tenant between the assignee and the tenant, and therefore such assignee is not entitled to a landlord's lien for advances to the tenant. State v. Elmore, 68 S. Car. 140.

The Assignee of a Rent Note is not entitled to a landlord's lien for advances, though the tenant promised to recognize him as landlord. Coker v. Britt, 78 Miss. 583.

It is otherwise if the reletting is with the consent and acquiescence of the tenant. Dolton v. Sickel, 66 N. J. L. 160.

A provision in a lease that if the premises become vacant during the term the landlord should be authorized to relet them and apply the rent to the payment of expenses of reletting and of the rent due, is valid, and the reletting by the landlord, in pursuance of such provision does not operate as a surrender. Jones v. Rushmore, 67 N. J. L. 157.

In Maryland it has been held that where a tenant abandons the premises, and the lessor expressly refuses to accept the surrender and notifies the tenant that he will rent the premises on his account and hold him for deficiencies in the rent, such a reletting by the lessor does not operate as a surrender. *Oldewurtel v. 372. 1. Implied Covenants. — A general provision for re-entry for conditions broken does not authorize re-entry for breach of implied covenants. Somers v. Loose, 127 Mich. 77.

"Covenants to Be Performed." — A right of re-entry reserved, should the lessee "make default of or in the performance of all or any of the covenants hereinbefore contained which on his part are or ought to be performed," was held not to authorize re-entry for breach of negative covenants. Harman v. Ainslie, (1903) 2 K. B. 241.

In Harman v. Ainslie, (1904) 1 K. B. 698, a provision for re-entry "if the said lessee shall commit any breach of the covenants hereinbefore contained and on his part to be performed," was held to authorize a re-entry for breach of a covenant not to sublet.

Short Form Lease Act. — The right of re-entry respecting short forms of lease applies to the breach of a negative as well as of an affirmative covenant, so that there is a right of re-entry for breach of the covenant not to assign or sublet without leave. McMahon v. Coyle, 5 Ont. L. Rep. 618.

LARCENY.

BY BENJAMIN TRAPNELL.

459. I. DEFINITION — At Common Law. — See note 1.

460. II. DIFFERENT KINDS OF LARCENY — 1. With Respect to Act of Taking — c. COMPOUND LARCENY — (2) Instances of Compound Larceny — (a) Larceny from the Person — Robbery. — See note 8.

461. Larceny from the Person Other than Robbery. — See notes 5, 6.

462. (b) Larceny from House or Other Building, Etc. — bb. CASES OTHER THAN BURGLARY — (bb.) American Statutes. — See note 9.

463. See note 1.

464. 2. With Respect to Value or Nature of Subject — a. GRAND LARCENY — (1) Value of Subject. — See note 1.

(2) Nature of Subject — (a) In General. — See note 3.

(b) Things Designated by Statute — Domestic Animals. — See note 6.

465. Crops in Field. — See note 5.

(3) Situs of Subject. — See note 8.

459. 1. Larceny Defined — Delaware. — State v. Stevens, 2 Penn. (Del.) 486; State v. Conlan, 3 Penn. (Del.) 218; State v. Kavanaugh, 4 Penn. (Del.) 131; State v. Carr, 4 Penn. (Del.) 523.

Illinois. — Watts v. People, 204 Ill. 233.

Indiana. — Stillwell v. State, 155 Ind. 552.

Mississippi. — Reed v. Greenville, 83 Miss. 192.

Missouri. — State v. Murphy, 90 Mo. App. 548; State v. Waghalter, 177 Mo. 676.

Wisconsin. — Fetkenhauer v. State, 112 Wis. 491.

460. 8. Robbery Is Larceny with the element of force or intimidation added. People v. Clark, 145 Cal. 727. See generally the title ROBBERY, 992, 9, 10. Compare Smith v. State, 117 Ga. 320, 97 Am. St. Rep. 165.

461. 5. Statutes in United States — Any Taking from the Person. — In State v. Wilson, 107 La. 344, it was held that in Louisiana there is no distinction between larceny from the person and larceny otherwise than from the person; so that a secret theft from the person is to be prosecuted and punished as a simple larceny, and not as an attempt to rob, which necessarily implies violence or putting in fear.

6. Under the Texas Statute. — Harris v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1901) 65 S. W. Rep. 921.

462. 9. Statutes in United States Affecting Larceny in House, Etc. — Jefferson v. State, 117 Ga. 710; Heard v. State, 120 Ga. 848.

Larceny from Burning Building. — The Michigan statute (Comp. Laws Mich., § 11551) makes special provision for larceny from a building which is on fire. People v. Klammer, (Mich. 1904) 190 N. W. Rep. 600.

Church, Schoolhouse, or Public Building. — Fletcher v. Com., (Ky. 1904) 80 S. W. Rep. 1089.

463. 1. Goods under Protection of House. — The theft of goods from a passenger car, which is under the shed of a union passenger depot, is held in Georgia to be larceny from the house, and to be a felony, where the value of the goods exceeds fifty dollars, notwithstanding the fact that Pen. Code Ga., § 185, makes it a misdemeanor to enter and steal from a railroad car. Bone v. State, 121 Ga. 147.

464. 1. Aggregate Value of Stolen Articles. — Weaver v. Com., (Ky. 1905) 86 S. W. Rep. 551; State v. Montgomery, 17 S. Dak. 500; Flynn v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1904) 83 S. W. Rep. 206.

Where Property Belongs to Different Persons and is located at different places, though all are within the same "wagon-yard," each theft constitutes a different offense though they are committed in rapid succession; and if the value of the property stolen from any one place is not sufficient to constitute the offense of grand larceny, the aggregate value cannot be considered in order to sustain a conviction thereof. State v. Maggard, 160 Mo. 469, 83 Am. St. Rep. 484. See infra, this title, 469, 1, 2.

3. No Value Required to Be Shown. — Quinn v. People, 32 Colo. 135.

4. Confessions. — Gibson v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1904) 83 S. W. Rep. 1119.

An extrajudicial confession of a defendant charged with larceny may be considered in connection with proper corroborative evidence in determining whether the corpus delicti has been proved, though it is not alone sufficient to prove it. Griffiths v. State, 163 Ind. 555.

The Expression of a Desire to Plead Guilty, when made out of court, is in effect a confession of guilt, and is admissible in evidence. Abrams v. State, 121 Ga. 170.

5. Offer to Compromise Held an Admission. — Collins v. State, 115 Wis. 596.

8. Admissions by Conduct or Acts. — The conduct of the accused while the search warrant was read to him, and during the search, which resulted in finding the stolen goods, is admissible in evidence. Gilford v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1903) 78 S. W. Rep. 692.

The Silence of the Defendant, when he is charged with theft, is a circumstance to go to the jury on the question of his guilt or innocence. State v. Major, 70 S. Cal. 387.

State v. King, 122 Iowa 1; State v. Lee, (Oregon 1905) 79 Pac. Rep. 577. See generally the title PROOF OF OTHER CRIMES.

496. 4. Asportation an Essential Element of Larceny. — State v. Carr, 4 Penn. (Del.) 523; State v. Boatright, 182 Mo. 33.

497. 1. Removal from Place Previously Occupied. — Where one assumes to sell to another property which does not belong to the seller, conveys it by bill of sale, and points out the property to the purchaser, but makes no actual delivery thereof, there is no such asportation as to constitute larceny on the part of the seller. Long v. State, 44 Fla. 134.

2. Where the Larceny Is from the Person, carrying away is not necessary to complete the offense, under Pen. Code Cal., § 484, subdiv. 2. People v. Lonnen, 139 Cal. 634.

There is no larceny from the person where one merely thrusts his hand into the pocket of another and touches money therein, but does not seize or secure it. Tarrango v. State, 44 Tex. Crim. 385.

498. 3. Things Attached to Person or Premises — Severance Necessary. — An attempt to unscrew a diamond stud from the shirt front of another does not constitute larceny from the person, where the would-be thief is captured without his having detached the stud. Rodriguez v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1903) 71 S. W. Rep. 596.

6. Party in Possession Regarded as Owner. — Bryant v. Com., (Ky. 1902) 68 S. W. Rep. 846; Barnes v. State, 46 Tex. Crim. 513. Compare Merritt v. State, 73 Ark. 32.

Compare Currier v. State, 157 Ind. 114, holding that it is larceny to deprive another of his property with intent to compel him to pay a claim which he does not owe, or to perform work which he is under no obligation to perform, in order to avoid the loss of his property.

8. Lucri Causa Held an Essential Element of Larceny. — State v. Palmer, 4 Penn. (Del.) 126; State v. Carr, 4 Penn. (Del.) 523; State v. Littrell, 170 Mo. 13.

505. 5. Conversion of Thing Taken to Use of Third Person. — In Texas the offense is complete even though the thief had no purpose to appropriate the thing stolen to his own use, where it was his intent permanently to deprive the owner of his property and to vest the ownership in a third person. Lopez v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1904) 80 S. W. Rep. 1016, 1197.

LATERAL OR BRANCH RAILROADS.

560. I. DEFINITION. — See notes 1, 2.

561. II. LATERAL RAILROADS GENERALLY — 1. Right to Construct and to Take Land for the Purpose — a. ACQUIRED ONLY BY GRANT FROM THE STATE
— See note 3.

Power of President and Directors of Company. — See note 4.

562. b. CONSTRUCTION OF LEGISLATIVE GRANTS. — See notes 1, 4

563. Construction of Particular Provisions of Charters and General Statutes.
note 2.

564. 2. Duty to Maintain and Operate. — See note 1.

565. III. SPURS TO PRIVATE ESTABLISHMENTS — 1. Right to Construct, and to Take Land for the Purpose — b. ACQUISITION OF RIGHT BY OWNERS OF PRIVATE ESTABLISHMENTS. — See note 4.

566. 2. Duty to Furnish and Operate. — See notes 2, 4.

In Some Jurisdictions There Are Constitutional Provisions or Statutes. — See note 5.

560. 1. The Usual and Ordinary Meaning of "Branch Road," as applied to railroads, is a road connected with the main line, but not a mere incident of it, or construed simply to facilitate the business of the chief railway, but designed to have a business of its own for the transportation of persons and property to and from places not reached by the principal route. Grey v. Greenville, etc., R. Co., 59 N. J. Eq. 372.

2. Com. v. Erie, etc., R. Co., 3 Dauphin Co. Rep. (Pa.) 189.

561. 3. General Statutes. — Ulmer v. Lime Rock R. Co., 98 Me. 579.

Finding by Judge of Superior Court — Existing Franchise. — Chapter 166 of the Public Acts of Connecticut of 1889, p. 97, requiring a finding by a judge of the Superior Court that the construction of a branch is a public convenience and necessity, abridges no special franchises previously granted. Hartford, etc., R. Co. v. Wagner, 73 Conn. 506.

4. Discretion of President and Directors. — Com. v. Erie, etc., R. Co., 3 Dauphin Co. Rep. (Pa.) 189; Price v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 209 Pa. St. 81, the latter case holding that where the statute provides for the making of such lateral railroads or branches "as the president and directors may deem advantageous and suited to promote the convenience" of the inhabitants of the county and the interests of the company, the courts cannot review such discretion exercised in good faith.

562. 1. Grants Strictly Construed. — Brooklyn, etc., R. Co. v. Long Island R. Co., 72 N. Y.

App. Div. 496. See also Waycross Air-Line R. Co. v. Southern Pine Co., 111 Ga. 233.

4. Price v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 209 Pa. St. 81.

563. 2. Railroads Passing Through County. — Where a statute gives to a railroad the privilege of constructing and operating branches within the limits of any county "through which said road may 'pass,' it applies, although the whole railroad is within the limits of one county. Grey v. Greenville, etc., R. Co., 59 N. J. Eq. 372.

New System — Fundamental Changes. — Under a charter giving to a street railway company the privilege of making branches and extensions, it may construct a new system, which fundamentally changes its business. Laconia St. Railway Petition, 71 N. H. 355.

564. 1. Forfeiture of Franchise. — Ulmer v. Lime Rock R. Co., 98 Me. 579.

565. 4. Private Sidings Not Part of Railway. — Cowan v. North British R. Co., 11 R. & Can. T. Cas. 96.

566. 2. Railroad Companies Not Required to Furnish and Operate Spurs to Private Establishments. — Ulmer v. Lime Rock R. Co., 98 Me. 579.

4. Right to Discontinue Delivery at Private Siding. — See Cowan v. North British R. Co., 11 R. & Can. T. Cas. 96.

5. For the Construction of the English Statute of 1845 (8 & 9 Vict., c. 20), § 78, see Lancashire Brick, etc., Co. v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., 71 L. J. K. B. 431, (1902) 1 K. B. 651, 86 L. T. N. S. 176, 11 R. & Can. T. Cas. 138.

567. 3. Right of the Public to Use.— See note 3.

IV. SIDINGS, SWITCHES, AND SIMILAR APPENDAGES.— See note 6.

569. LAW.— See note 9.

573. LAWFUL—LAWFULLY.— See note 2.

576. LAWFUL ISSUE.— See note 1.

567. 3. Ulmer v. Lime Rock R. Co., 98 Me. 579.

6. Right to Construct Sidings, Switches, and Similar Appendages.— "One who, in general terms, grants to a railroad company, chartered for the purpose of constructing and operating a railroad for public use, a right of way for its railroad over the lands of the grantor, does not thereby grant a right of way for any and every temporary and private spur-track, or branch road, which the railroad company may see fit to construct from its railroad across such lands." Waycross Air-Line R. Co. v. Southern Pine Co., 111 Ga. 233.

A Siding Belongs to a Railway Company where such siding is on the company's land, was built by the company, and is used, maintained, and repaired by the company. Girardot v. Great Eastern R. Co., 11 R. & Can. T. Cas. 244.

Right to Communicate with Sidings of Another Railway.— See Richard v. Great Western R. Co., 11 R. & Can. T. Cas. 133.

7. Provision for Credit of Rent Towards Purchase Price. — Freeman v. Stewart, 36 N. Bruns. 465.

Statutory Provisions for Redemption of Ground Rents. — In Maryland, the statute provides that in case of leases for longer periods than fifteen years, the lessee may redeem the lease upon the payment of a certain amount based on the rent reserved, and this applies to leases both of improved and unimproved land. Swan v. Kemp, 97 Md. 686.

8. Alternate Stipulations. — De Vitt v. Kaufman County, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 332.

9. Option to Purchase. — Butler v. Threlkeld, 117 Iowa 116; Tilton v. Sterling Coal, etc., Co., 28 Utah 173, 107 Am. St. Rep. 598; Yuill v. White, 5 N. W. Ter. 275; Wellmaker v. Wheatley, 123 Ga. 201; Rankin v. Rankin, 216 Ill. 132.

A provision in a lease giving the lessee the option to purchase after the expiration of fifteen years and within the term is not invalid as a suspension of the power of alienation (Cal. Civ. Code, § 716), nor does such a provision create a contingent remainder on a term of years within the prohibition of section 776. Blakeman v. Miller, 136 Cal. 138, 89 Am. St. Rep. 120.

Failure to Fix Purchase Price. — An option given the lessee to purchase "at a price not to exceed three thousand dollars" is not invalid for uncertainty as for a failure to fix the purchase price, as the right to purchase at the full sum of three thousand dollars is absolute. Heyward v. Willmarth, 87 N. Y. App. Div. 125.

An option to purchase "at a fair valuation by appraisement," is sufficiently certain, and the specific performance thereof may be enforced. Lester Agricultural Chemical Works v. Selby, (N. J. 1904) 59 Atl. Rep. 247.

5. Relation of Parties Prior to Exercise of Option. — See Tilton v. Sterling Coal, etc., Co., 28 Utah 173, 107 Am. St. Rep. 598.

Liability for Rent. — A tenant is liable for all rent that accrues prior to the exercise of the option to purchase though such rent is payable for a period in advance and the conveyance in pursuance of the exercise of the option was made before the expiration of the period to be covered by such advance rent. Granger v. Riggs, 118 Ga. 164.

688. 2. Provisions for Perpetual Renewals Upheld. — See Tischner v. Rutledge, 35 Wash. 285.

3. In Tischner v. Rutledge, 35 Wash. 285, a lease for one year "with the privilege at the same rate and terms each year thereafter from year to year" was held not to entitle the lessee to a perpetual renewal. In this case the court laid some stress upon the fact that the original lease contained only covenants applicable to a short term.

4. Alternative Stipulations. — Niederstein v. Cusick, 178 N. Y. 543, reversing 83 N. Y. App. Div. 36.

6. Niederstein v. Cusick, 178 N. Y. 543, reversing 83 N. Y. App. Div. 36; Matter of Coatsworth, 160 N. Y. 114, reversing 39 N. Y. App. Div. 656.

4. Hausauer v. Dahlman, 163 N. Y. 567, affirming 18 N. Y. App. Div. 475.

In Muller v. Trafford, (1901) 1 Ch. 54, it was held that where a lessee sublet covenanting to renew the sublease if he obtained a renewal from the lessor, and afterwards assigned his leasehold, the sublessee was not entitled to a renewal as against the assignee who, in his own name, obtained a renewal from the original lessor.

821. 1. Legatee Including Devise in Will. — Weigel v. Green, 218 Ill. 239, quoting 18 AM. AND ENG. ENCYC. OF LAW (2d ed.) 821.

"A Legatee is one who receives a legacy. The ordinary popular meaning of a legacy, and its usual legal signification, is a gift or gratuity, not the payment of a debt or a provision to pay a debt." Pentz's Estate, 200 Pa. St. 2.

Legates Interpreted Strictly in Statute. — Matter of Ross, 140 Cal. 282.

"The terms legatee and 'devisee' are more strictly interpreted as referring, the one to personality, and the other to realty, in the construction of statutes than in the construction of wills and deeds." Weigel v. Green, 218 Ill. 239, citing 18 AM. AND ENG. ENCYC. OF LAW (2d ed.) 821.

In Sense of Children. — In Lamar v. Harris, 121 Ga. 285, it was held that where the testator used the words legatees and children interchangeably, they were synonymous for the purposes of that item of the will.

822. 3. Legislative Power. — Arms v. Ayer, 192 Ill. 601; Brown v. Galveston, 97 Tex. 1; Sluder v. St. Louis Transit Co., 189 Mo. 149, quoting 18 AM. AND ENG. ENCYC. OF LAW (2d ed.) 822. In this case the court said: "The term legislative power as so applied to a city means only the power to pass rules and regulations for the government of the municipality, the conduct of its officers, and the conduct of the citizens with respect to the municipality."

For a general discussion of waiver by agents, see the title INSURANCE, vol. 16, p. 942 et seq.

An agent who is actually authorized to extend the time for payment of a premium or waive a forfeiture may do so although the policy provides that only the president, vice-president, or secretary of the company shall have such power. Washington L. Ins. Co. v. Berwald, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 72 S. W. Rep. 436.

In Russell v. Prudential Ins. Co., 176 N. Y. 178, 98 Am. St. Rep. 656, it was held that the agent must have express authority to make the waiver.

Promise to Pay What Was Found to Be Due upon an Accounting. — When in an action commenced in 1902 upon a promissory note given by the defendant to the plaintiff in 1881, for £100, with interest, payable on demand, it was proved that the defendant had in 1901 written a letter, in which, after asserting that there had been certain payments by him on account of the note, he used expressions importing that he was willing that an account should be taken between himself and the plaintiff, and that he would pay what was thereupon found to be due, and it was found on trial that no payments had been made on account of the note, it was held that the letter afforded sufficient evidence of a new promise to take the case out of the statute of limitations. *Languish v. 5. Husband and Wife.—Clark v. Staber, (Iowa 1904) 98 N. W. Rep. 560; Jackson v. Longwell, 63 Kan. 93; Curtiss v. Perry, 126 Mich. 600; San Antonio Real Estate, etc., Assoc. v. Stewart, 94 Tex. 441, 86 Am. St. Rep. 864.

Where the husband makes payments on his note secured by mortgage on the homestead executed by husband and wife jointly, the wife cannot plead the statute of limitations in a suit to foreclose the mortgage. Skinner v. Moore, 64 Kan. 360, 91 Am. St. Rep. 244; Investment Securities Co. v. Manwarren, 64 Kan. 636; Fuller v. McMahan, 64 Kan. 441; Roberts v. Roberts, 10 N. Dak. 531.

Where a man makes a mortgage on land, and subsequently the property becomes the community estate of himself and his wife, payments on the mortgage debt made by him will not stop the statute of limitations from running in favor of the wife. Hanna v. Kasson, 26 Wash. 568.

LLOYD'S ASSOCIATIONS.

448. I. DEFINITION AND EXPLANATIONS — The Most Important Peculiarity. — See note 6.

451. IV. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF INDIVIDUAL UNDERWRITERS — On the Policy. — See note 3.

452. LOAD. — See note 3.

453. LOAN — LEND — LENT, ETC. — See note 2.

454. See notes 1, 2.

448. 6. Definition. — In Durbrow v. Eppens, 65 N. J. L. 19, the court said: "A Lloyd's insurance originally was an insurance based upon a fund made up of deposits by each one of the members, from which, when a loss was adjusted, the agent took the means of payment. In this country, in adopting the Lloyd's system of insurance, money representing the entire insurance was not deposited. In lieu of such a deposit the members each contributed a certain sum to make up a fund, and each contracted with agents, who were the representatives of the association, to pay in from time to time so much as should be needed to pay losses. Under the Lloyd's system of insurance, after the loss was adjusted or ascertained by action against the agents, the insured received from the fund so provided the amount of loss. The fund deposited was, in the strictest sense, a trust fund for the benefit of persons holding policies. Under the Lloyd's system, as adopted in this country, the trust in favor of the insured consists of the amount deposited by each member and the covenant on the part of each member to pay in money enough to answer the amount due from him upon such loss."

449. 2. Lloyd's Association. — Members of unincorporated association of insurers held liable as joint insurers. Imperial Shale Brick Co. v. Jewett, 169 N. Y. 143, reversed 42 N. Y. App. Div. 588.

451. 3. See Durbrow v. Eppens, 65 N. J. L. 19, holding that the attorney of a Lloyd's association in a suit against the executor of a deceased underwriter, whose share in the association fund was insufficient to satisfy claims on policies issued in his lifetime, was entitled to recover the amount of the deficiency.

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.

BY J. H. FREESE.

634. II. DISTINGUISHED FROM OTHER OFFENSES — 1. Larceny. — See note 1.

2. Trespass. — See note 2.

III. HISTORY AND NATURE OF THE OFFENSE. — See note 3.

634. 1. Breaking a Window Pane for the Purpose of Committing Larceny is an indictable misdemeanor under the English Malicious Damage Act. M'Dowell v. Dublin Corp., (1903) 2 Ir. R. 541.

2. Distinguished from Trespass. — See State v.

Culbreath, 71 Ark. 80, holding that the offense created by Sand. & H. Dig. Ark., § 1784, is trespass rather than malicious mischief.

3. A Misdemeanor at Common Law. — State v. McLain, 92 Mo. App. 456; State v. Switzer, 59 S. Car. 225.

636. IV. THE PROPERTY SUBJECT — 2. By Statute — Property. — See notes 1, 2, 3, 5.

Animals. — See note 7.

Cattle. — See note 18.

637. Buildings. — See notes 3, 4.

"Agricultural Product," "Vegetable Product," "Growing Crops," and "Grain." —

See note 10.

638. The Value of the Property Is Immaterial. — See note 18.

V. THE PHYSICAL ACT — 1. At Common Law. — See note 20.

639. 2. By Statute — a. STATUTES RELATING TO INANIMATE PROPERTY. — See notes 3, 4, 6, 7.

640. See note 1.

b. STATUTES RELATING TO ANIMALS. — See note 5.

641. VI. THE INTENT — 1. At Common Law and under Statutes in Affirmation Thereof — a. MALICE AN ESSENTIAL INGREDIENT OF THE OFFENSE. — See note 5.

b. WHAT CONSTITUTES MALICE — (1) In General. — See note 6.

(2) In Killing or Injuring Domestic Animals. — See note 12.

642. c. PROOF OF MALICE — PRESUMPTIONS. — See notes 4, 5, 6, 8.

643. 2. Under Statutes Changing the Common-law Rule. — See note 1.

636. 1. Property. — Pollet v. State, 115 Ga. 234.

2. Real or Personal Property. — Stanton v. State, 45 Tex. Crim. 168.

A Mere Possessory Right to real property was not intended to be protected by Pen. Code Tex. 1895, art. 791. The statute is intended as a protection to the owner. Adams v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1904) 81 S. W. Rep. 963.

3. Personal Property. — Stanton v. State, 45 Tex. Crim. 168.

A Threshing Machine was held to be within a statute prohibiting the wilful destruction of any goods, wares, merchandise, or other personal property of another. State v. McLain, 92 Mo. App. 456.

Oil in a Tank is "personal property" under Crim. Stat. S. Car., § 165. State v. Switzer, 59 S. Car. 225.

5. A Dog Is Property. — See Florida Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Davis, 45 Fla. 276; Vantrees v. McGee, 26 Ind. App. 525; Fagin v. Humane Soc., 5 Ohio Dec. 596.

7. Dog. — See Atchison v. State, 44 Tex. Crim. 551.

18. Goats. — See Garza v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1901) 62 S. W. Rep. 751.

637. 3. Public Building. — Mitchell v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1901) 62 S. W. Rep. 572.

Wilful Injury to Public Jail. — People v. Boren, 139 Cal. 210.

4. House. — Adkin v. Pillen, 136 Mich. 682, 11 Detroit Leg. N. 163.

10. Crops Attached to the Soil. — State v. Green, 106 La. 440.

638. 18. See Stanton v. State, 45 Tex. Crim. 168.

20. Extent of Injury. — Pollet v. State, 115 Ga. 234.

639. 3. Destroy or Injure. — Pollet v. State, 115 Ga. 234.

4. "Injuring and Defacing" Public Building. — Mitchell v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1901) 62 S. W. Rep. 572.

6. Burning. — Stanton v. State, 45 Tex. Crim. 168.

7. "Breaks Down, Pulls Down, or Otherwise Destroys or Impairs Any Public Jail." — People v. Boren, 139 Cal. 210.

640. 1. "Sever from the Soil." — State v. Green, 106 La. 440.

5. Kill, Maim, or Wound. — Reg. v. Mennel, 1 N. W. Ter. 487.

641. 5. Malice an Essential Ingredient. — State v. Boies, 68 Kan. 171.

"The act must be done with wicked or malicious intent or motive—wrongfully and intentionally done, without just cause or excuse." Carstarphen v. State, 112 Ga. 230.

6. Ill-will Towards Owner Not Essential. — State v. Boies, 68 Kan. 167; State v. Gilligan, 23 R. I. 400.

12. Killing an Animal Belonging to Another in the Honest Belief that It is an Act of Mercy to Do So, the animal being in a helpless and dying condition, is not malicious. Reg. v. Mennel, 1 N. W. Ter. 487.

642. 4. Proof of Ill-will to show motive. State v. Wideman, 68 S. Car. 119. See also Garza v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1901) 62 S. W. Rep. 751.

5. Malice Presumed from the Wilful Doing of an Unlawful Act. — Reg. v. Mennel, 1 N. W. Ter. 487.

6. Presumption of Malice from the Manner or Circumstances of the Act. — See State v. Gilligan, 23 R. I. 400.

8. Malice Inferred from the Wantonness, Cruelty, or Recklessness of the Act. — Porter v. State, 83 Miss. 23, wherein the court said: "The result arose out of a spirit of general abandoned deviltry, which was tantamount to wilfulness as to all men and to all animals he might confront."

643. 1. Under the Express Provisions of the Later English Statutes. — State v. Boies, 68 Kan. 167, quoting 19 AM. AND ENG. ENCYC. OF LAW (2d ed.) 643.

643. "Wilful" or "Wilfully." — See note 2.
 "Wantonly." — See note 8.

644. None of These Terms "Wilfully," "Wantonly," or "Unlawfully" Imply Malice. — See note 2.

VII. DEFENSES — 2. Bona Fide Claim of Right. — See note 7.

645. See note 1.

4. Protection of Property from Trespassing Animals. — See note 4.

646. VIII. PUNISHMENT. — See note 6.

643. 2. Brick Thrown at Owner Striking House. — In Niblo v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1904) 79 S. W. Rep. 31, it was held that a conviction for "unlawfully, wilfully, and maliciously" throwing a brickbat at the private residence of the prosecutor was not warranted by evidence showing that the defendant — a woman — threw the brick at the person of the prosecutor, and, by reason of defective marksmanship, struck the house.

8. "Wanton" or "Wantonly." — State v. Gilligan, 23 R. I. 400.

644. 2. "Wantonly" Does not Imply Malice Toward Owner. — State v. Gilligan, 23 R. I. 400.

7. Act Done under Bona Fide Claim of Right. — Carstarphen v. State, 112 Ga. 230; Adams v. State, (Tex. Crim. 1904) 81 S. W. Rep. 963; Rex v. Johnson, 7 Ont. L. Rep. 525.

Abatement of Nuisance. — People v. Severance, 125 Mich. 556.

House Belonging to Defendant's Wife. — In Adkin v. Pallen, 136 Mich. 682, the injury to the house was done at a time when the title was still in the defendant's wife, although the prosecutor held a tax lien thereon. It was held that the defendant's act was presumably authorized by his wife, and therefore no offense was committed under Comp. Laws Mich. 1897, § 11584.

645. 1. Claim of Right No Defense Where Unnecessary Damage Is Done. — See People v. Severance, 125 Mich. 556, 7 Detroit Leg. N. 650.

Shooting Dog — Self-defense. — Atchison v. State, 44 Tex. Crim. 551.

4. Killing of Dog by a Gamekeeper. — Miles v. Hutchings, (1903) 2 K. B. 714.

646. 6. Punishment — Construction of Peculiar Provisions of Statutes. — People v. Boren, 139 Cal. 210.

Washington. — Noblett v. Bartsch, 31 Wash. 24, 96 Am. St. Rep. 886.

Wisconsin. — Small v. McGovern, 117 Wis. 608.

Prosecution Barred by Statute of Limitations. — Where a prosecution had been commenced by advice of the district attorney, which had been sought in good faith and was based upon a full disclosure to him of all the facts known to the prosecutor, the fact that the binding over was after the prosecution was barred by the statute of limitations did not make the defendant in an action for malicious prosecution liable, unless it appeared that he had persisted in the prosecution after he knew that it was barred. Wenger v. Phillips, 195 Pa. St. 214, 78 Am. St. Rep. 810.

686. 1. Rule Applies Though Advice Erroneous. — National Surety Co. v. Mahry, 139 Ala. 217; Kansas, etc., Coal Co. v. Gallo-way, 71 Ark. 351, 100 Am. St. Rep. 79, quoting 19 AM. AND ENG. 5. Particular Instances in Which Relation Held Not to Exist — Railroad Company and Porter in Employ of Sleeping Car Company. — Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hamler, 215 Ill. 525, 106 Am. St. Rep. 187.

13. 1. Relation Based on Contract. — Nelson v. Richardson, 108 Ill. App. 128; Hess v. Citron, (N. Y. City Ct. Gen. T.) 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 849; Nye v. Bill Nye Gold Min., etc., Co., 42 Oregon 560; Kosloski v. Kelly, 122 Wis. 665. See Mackintosh v. Kimball, 101 N. Y. App. Div. 494.

Mutuality of Contract Necessary. — Johnson v. Lawson, 18 Colo. App. 297; International Power Co. v. Hardy, 118 Ga. 512; Osterberg v. Trinity Church, 69 N. Y. App. Div. 612; Sagalowitz v. Pellman, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 32 Misc. (N. Y.) 508. See Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 342.

Contract Must Be Certain and Explicit. — Lee v. Smith, (N. Y. City Ct. Gen. T.) 33 Misc. (N. Y.) 792; Mackintosh v. Thompson, 58 N. Y. App. Div. 25; Miles v. Columbia Packers' Assoc., 41 Oregon 617; Cohn v. Sherman Refining Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 87 S. W. Rep. 1170.

Sufficiency of Contract. — Where plaintiff's claim is for services under an alleged contract of a certain date, and the evidence tends to show an offer to engage services at a fixed price at that time on defendant's part, and immediately afterwards a beginning of such services on plaintiff's part, with defendant's knowledge, and with no retraction of the proposition, it is error to instruct the jury, in substance, that there can be no recovery unless an express agreement on both sides was reached at the time alleged. Pettis v. Green River Asphalt Co., (Neb. 1904) 99 N. W. Rep. 235.

Terms of Contract Agreed upon but Not Reduced to Writing. — Where the terms of a contract of employment were agreed upon with the understanding that it should be reduced to writing, but the reduction to writing was not made a condition precedent to its completion, there was a valid oral contract. Featherstone Foundry, etc., Co. v. Criswell, (Ind. App. 1905) 75 N. E. Rep. 30.

Adoption of Terms of One Contract in Another. — Where a contract employing a person as agent to sell certain merchandise on commission provided that commissions should be paid back in all cases in which the account should be lost or the goods taken back, and a second contract for a different territory superseding the former contract is subsequently made, the provisions in the first contract for the repayment of commissions become a part of the second contract. Morrison Mfg. Co. v. Bryson, (Iowa 1905) 103 N. W. Rep. 1016.

Consideration for Modification of Contract. — It has been held that where a contract of employment is made for one year at a stipulated salary per month, an agreement during the term to receive less, or to pay more, than the contract price is void, unless supported by some change in place, hours, character of employment, or other consideration. Davis v. Morgan, 117 Ga. 504, 97 Am. St. Rep. 171.

Place of Performance. — Cook v. Todd, 72 S. W. Rep. 779, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1909.

Construction of Contract. — The construction of a contract of employment is for the court. School Dist. v. McDonald, 68 Neb. 610.

In the absence of express stipulations in a contract of employment, the question is not what was the understanding of the respective parties in fact, but what ought to have been their understanding in view of what was said and done under the circumstances in which they were placed. Higgins v. Shepard, 182 Mass. 364.

In the construction of a contract of employment all its terms are to be considered. Mayer v. Goldberg, 116 Wis. 96.

Parol Evidence Inadmissible to Vary Written Contract. — Harrington v. F. W. Brockman Commission Co., 107 Mo. App. 418; Eden v. Silberberg, 89 N. Y. App. Div. 259; McGarrigle v. McCosker, 83 N. Y. App. Div. 184, affirmed in part without opinion, 178 N. Y. 637; Shaff v. Schlachetzky, 62 N. Y. App. Div. 459.

2. Contract for "Steady Employment" unless There Should Be a Failure of Crops. — Turnbull v. Frey, (Neb. 1904) 99 N. W. Rep. 648.

Contract for Employment While Employer Retains Certain Business. — Where the plaintiff's assignor entered into the employ of the defendants, subject to the account of a certain silk mill remaining with them, it was held that the contract was not wholly indefinite, but depended for its determination upon the discontinuance of business relations between the defendants and the silk mill, and without other and more sufficient reasons than a mere whim or desire the defendants could not summarily dismiss their employee. Downes v. Poncet, (N. Y. City Ct. Gen. T.) 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 799.

Employment of Physician. — A physician employed in pursuance of the authority conferred by the regulations of the relief and hospital department of a railroad company to treat an injured employee in an emergency, where the company's surgeon cannot be reached, who was employed for no definite period of time, cannot recover for services rendered after being notified that his services were no longer needed, as the hospital surgeons were then ready to take charge of the case, and properly treat the patient in the company's hospital. Florida Southern R. Co. v. Steen, 45 Fla. 313.

Evidence as to Duration of Hiring. — Plaintiff testified that defendants employed him for the year 1897 at a salary of $450 for the year. The defendant with whom the agreement was made testified that he employed plaintiff for an indefinite time at thirty-five dollars per month. It was held that on this state of case it was manifest error to allow plaintiff to prove that it was defendants' custom to employ their clerks by the year, and that they so employed other clerks during the year 1897. The terms of express contracts cannot be proved in this way. Hartsell v. Masterson, 132 Ala. 275.

If the original contract of employment is not for a year, the mere continuance of the employment after the expiration of a year raises no presumption that there is a new employment for the period of one year. Carthage Wheel Co. v. Kelly, 8 Ohio Dec. 549.

It has been held that before the rule that where one enters into the employ of another under a contract for a year's service, and continues in the employment after the expiration of the year, it is presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the parties agreed to a continuance for another year at the same salary, can have any application, it must appear that in fact there was a prior contract for a whole year's service, and that services were rendered thereunder for at least one year. Caldwell v. Caldwell Co., (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 88 N. Y. Supp. 970.

In California it is provided by statute (Cal. Civ. Code, § 2012) that "where, after the expiration of an agreement respecting the wages and the term of service, the parties continue the relation of master and servant, they are presumed to have renewed the agreement for the same wages and term of service." Gabriel v. Suisun Bank, 145 Cal. 266.

16. 4. Contract of Hiring for a Year. — Brightson v. H. B. Clafin Co., 180 N. Y. 76.

17. 1. Presumption May Be Rebutted. — Laubach v. Cedar Rapids Supply Co., 122 Iowa 643; Home F. Ins. Co. v. Barber, 67 Neb. 644; Segler v. Bernstein, 82 N. Y. App. Div. 267.

2. What Servant May Recover. — Mugnier v. Dendinger, 104 La. 767; Williams v. Kansas City Suburban Belt R. Co., 85 Mo. App. 103; Hendrickson v. Woods, 77 N. Y. App. Div. 644. See Graves v. Graves, 70 Ark. 541.

It has been held that where a person is employed to do certain work at a reduced compensation in consideration of receiving future employment at a higher salary, the failure of the employer to perform his agreement as to future employment with increased compensation entitles the employee to treat the contract as rescinded, and to recover for the services rendered what they were actually worth. Davidson v. Laughlin, 138 Cal. 320.

5. Measure of Recovery by Servant. — See Stevens v. Michigan Soap Works, 134 Mich. 350, 10 Detroit Leg. N. 451.

A contract of employment at a salary of seventy-five dollars per month and traveling expenses provided that, should the employee continue his service for an entire year, and should the character of his business as to volume, etc., and his manner of conducting it, be satisfactory to the employer, the latter would make the salary equivalent to one hundred dollars per month by the payment of the twenty-five dollars excess at the close of the year, the determination of which should be left entirely to the employer. In an action to recover the excess salary, it was held that the satisfaction of the employer at the end of the year must be proved. Joseph Campbell Preserve Co. v. Holcomb, 67 Kan. 48.

Right to Bonus. — Where a servant was to receive a bonus, unless the master should exercise the reserved right to discharge him within the year, and he was not discharged, but served the full term, without any expression of dissatisfaction, it was held that he was entitled to the extra compensation. Fischer v. Conhaim, (N. Y. City Ct. Gen. T.) 35 Misc. (N. Y.) 125, affirmed (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 35 Misc. (N. Y.) 791.

Commissions with Advances. — A servant who is to be paid in commissions and is to be allowed advances must refund the excess of advances over earned commissions if he abandons the employment before the expiration of the contract period. Kupfer v. Holtzmann, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 88 N. Y. Supp. 362.

It has been held that where the employer has contracted to advance monthly sums to traveling salesmen, which are to be deducted at the end of the term of employment from the commissions earned, the employer cannot defeat an action to recover an unpaid advance by showing that the amount of the advances made exceeds the commissions earned. Schlesinger v. Burland, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 42 Misc. (N. Y.) 206.

When a contract provides for the payment of the servant by commissions, and for the payment of specified allowances to him at stated times, and no time is specified for the payment of the commissions, but the commission account is to be adjusted at the end of the period of employment, it has been held that the stipulated advances are to be paid irrespective of whether sufficient commissions have accumulated to cover the advances. Schwerin v. Rosen, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 45 Misc. (N. Y.) 409.

There can be no recovery for advances when the contract of employment has terminated and the commissions earned do not equal the advances which have been made. Souler v. McDowell Garment Mach. Co., (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 786.

6. Lee v. Washburn, 80 N. Y. App. Div. 410, reversing (Supm. Ct. Spec. T.) 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 311; Shute v. McVitee, (Tex. Civ. App.

21. 1. Strict Construction of Provisions Necessary. — See Cross v. Detroit Base Ball Club, 84 Mo. App. 526.

2. Waiver of Forfeiture. — It has been held that a master, by keeping a servant in his service to the end of the term, after notice of misconduct on the part of the servant, waives, as a matter of law, all right to forfeit his wages. Person v. McCargar, 92 Minn. 294.

3. Time of Payment Not Fixed. — Burnetta v. Marceline Coal Co., 180 Mo. 241.

But it has been said that an engagement to work one year for two dollars per day, payment to be made at the expiration of the term, is so unusual that it will not be presumed. Chicago Soap, etc., Co. v. Stansbury, 99 Ill. App. 488.

In a contract between the plaintiff and the defendant mining company employing the plaintiff as caretaker of the defendant's mine, it was agreed that the plaintiff should be paid for his services at the rate of four dollars per day, and that he was to be paid "at the end of each consecutive fourth week of service" the sum of two dollars per day, and the balance of two dollars per day was to be retained as an earnest for faithful services up to the time defendant might resume operations of its business or dispose of its property, when the whole amount that was retained, as above stated, would become due and payable. employment it was the general understanding that the defendant would resume operations within a reasonable time, or use reasonable efforts to dispose of its property. It was held that in the absence of any express declarations of the parties to that effect, there being no time specified within which operations should be resumed or property be sold, the law presumes that it was the intention of the parties that the contingencies mentioned should occur within a reasonable time, and the plaintiff, who had been performing the services of caretaker for a period of four years, was entitled to be paid the amount retained, although the defendant had neither resumed operations nor disposed of the mine. Hoods v. Hampton Plains Exploration Co., 106 Fed. Rep. 408.

Presumption of Payment of Wages of Domestics. — Wages for domestic servants are presumed to be paid at the periods customary at the time and in the neighborhood, and claims for such wages for unusual length of time, especially those not made until after the claimant has left the service, must be supported by affirmative proof that they have not been paid. Hayes's Estate, 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 412.

21. 4. Time of Payment Fixed. — See Wagner v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co., 82 Mo. App. 287.

It has been held that under a contract of employment for ten years, with compensation fixed at a specified sum per month, the amount specified was due and owing at the conclusion of each month's service. Stone v. Bancroft, 139 Cal. 78, affirming 139 Cal. 82.

The penalty prescribed by the Arkansas statute (Ark. Acts 1889, p. 76) for a failure to pay servants on the day of their discharge is incurred although the amount due a discharged servant has been paid before suit brought. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Pickett, 70 Ark. 226.

Where at the time of a servant's discharge there was a shortage in his account with the master it was held that the penalty prescribed by the Arkansas statute did not attach until the master had had a reasonable opportunity to ascertain the amount due the discharged servant. Fordyce v. Gorey, 69 Ark. 344.

In an action to recover the penalty and attorney's fees prescribed by the Indiana statute it is necessary that the facts showing the absence of the contract mentioned in the statute be alleged and proved. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Long, 160 Ind. 564.

It is essential to a recovery under the Indiana statute that the facts showing the absence of a written contract be alleged and proved. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Glover, 159 Ind. 166.

23. 3. Presumption of Payment. — It has been held that where a person serves in the capacity of a domestic servant, and no demand for payment of wages is made by the servant for a considerable period after such service has terminated, the inference is, either that the wages have been paid, or that the service was performed on the footing that no payment was to be made. *Taylor v. Instructions that if plaintiff gave some attention to his own affairs while in defendant's employ, with defendant's consent, and that if he gave time to his own affairs, but not so as to take up time which should have been devoted to defendant's business, such acts were not breaches of plaintiff's contract, were held proper, especially in view of the counterparts of said instructions given at defendant's request, that if plaintiff neglected defendant's business, to attend to his own, this was a breach of his contract. Biest v. Ver Steeg Shoe Co., 97 Mo. App. 137.

Where it is stipulated in the contract of employment that the servant shall give his whole time and attention to the business of the employer, he has no right to engage in other work even though it may not interfere with his duties to the master. Hughes v. Toledo Scale, etc., Co., 112 Mo. App. 91; Atlantic Compress Co. v. Young, 118 Ga. 868.

13. False Representations. — An employer is justified in discharging an agent who, at the time of entering into the contract of employment, falsely represented that he had an office as suitably located and as well furnished as the office of the employer's competitor in the same place. Hughes v. Toledo Scale, etc., Co., 112 Mo. App. 91.

But a representation by a servant made at the time of entering into the employment, that he could divert business to the employer, has been held to be a mere statement of an opinion and not a fraud upon the employer. Weik v. Williamson-Gunning Advertising Co., 109 Mo. App. 6.

Concealing Marriage. — An employer has been held justified in discharging an employee who on entering the employment concealed the fact that she was married, although she knew that the employer would not employ married women in his service. Parks v. Tolman, 113 Mo. App. 14.

It has been held that the contract of a party to render service to another for more than a year from its date is within the statute, notwithstanding one or both parties may have the option of ending the contract by notice before a year elapses. Biest v. Ver Steeg Shoe Co., 97 Mo. App. 137.

Contract for Indefinite Period. — A contract of hiring for no definite time, it has been held, is not within the statute of frauds for the reason that the contract may be performed to the satisfaction of the parties within a year. Mathews v. Wallace, 104 Mo. App. 96.

2. No Recovery on Contract. — Spinney v. Hill, 81 Minn. 316.

3. It has been held that a contract to perform services, though within the statute of frauds, is valid to the extent of performance, and the contract governs as to the rate of compensation. Murphy v. De Haan, 116 Iowa 61.

5. Contract Terminated Without Servant's Fault. — Banta v. Banta, 84 N. Y. App. Div. 138, citing 20 AM. AND ENG. ENCYC. OF LAW (2d ed.) 48.

It has been held that the contract of employment, though within the statute, controls the rights and remedies of the parties with respect to what has been done, and fixes the value of services rendered under it, when the person performing such services is discharged after part performance, without fault on his part. Spinney v. Hill, 81 Minn. 316.

6. It has been held that the invalidity of a contract for services by its terms not to be performed within a year is not available to the master to defeat a recovery by the servant of his agreed compensation where he has been permitted to perform and has performed the conditions imposed upon him. In such case the void contract may afford a measure of the value of the services. Scheuer v. Monash, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 668.

7. Contrary View. — Scheuer v. Monash, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 35 Misc. (N. Y.) 276.

the grading of a mill site on public lands for the use of the mines, and the plaintiff, in digging and leveling off a grade for a quartz mill, discovered a pocket of quartz gold. The ground was public land of the United States, and the defendants had entered upon it for the purpose of grading a site for a quartz mill, but there was no location of the land with a view of acquiring title under the laws of the United States. This gold was not found within the limits of the space occupied by the defendants for the site of a quartz mill. It was held that the plaintiff, by his discovery and appropriation, acquired title to the gold. Burns v. Clark, 133 Cal. 634, 85 Am. St. Rep. 233.

50. 5. Contracts for Work Longer than Specified Hours. — Fitzgerald v. International Paper Co., 96 Me. 220.

Statute Limiting Hours of Labor in Bakeries Held Unconstitutional. — Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, reversing 177 N. Y. 145, 101 Am. St. Rep. 773, which affirmed 73 N. Y. App. Div. 120.

Statute Limiting the Hours of Employment of Females in Certain Employments Held Valid. — Wenham v. State, 65 Neb. 394.

Statute Limiting Hours of Labor of Miners, Etc. — It has been held that the Nevada Act, Feb. 23, 1903 (Stat. 1903, p. 33, c. 10) imposing a penalty on any one working more than eight hours a day in any mine, smelter, or mill, for the reduction of ores, is not void, under the constitution of Nevada, art. 1, § 1, guaranteeing the right to acquire and possess property, but is sustainable as a valid health regulation under the police power. Ex p. Kair, (Nev. 1905) 80 Pac. Rep. 463.

New York Statute Held to Apply Only to Public Work. — Section 3 of the New York Labor Law (N. Y. Laws 1897, c. 415, as amended by N. Y. Laws 1899, c. 567) has been held to apply only to public work. Downey v. Bender, 57 N. Y. App. Div. 310.

8. Damages Paid by Master to Third Person. — Costa v. Yochim, 104 La. 170; Gaffner v. Johnson, 39 Wash. 437.

9. Judgment Against Master as Evidence. — It has been held that the judgment against the master for damages is evidence against the servant, who was notified and who was a witness in the case in which the master was condemned to pay damages. Costa v. Yochim, 104 La. 170.

52. 1. Gaffner v. Johnson, 39 Wash. 437, citing 20 AM. AND ENG. ENCYC. OF LAW (2d ed.) 52.

5. Nonfeasance in Course of Employment. — See Bryce v. Southern R. Co., 125 Fed. Rep. 958.

It has been said that master and servant cannot be jointly liable for the tort of the servant in the line of his employment, where the liability of the master is predicated solely upon the doctrine of respondeat superior. Each may be sued separately, the servant for his negligent act done, the master under the doctrine of respondeat superior. McNemar v. Cohn, 115 Ill. App. 31.

8. Contract to Furnish Medical Attendance. — Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Rubio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 65 S. W. Rep. 1126.

Statute Requiring Ambulances to Be Maintained at Mines. — Davis v. Pennsylvania Coal Co., 209 Pa. St. 153.

Hospital Maintained by Master. — Where a hospital is maintained by the master for the treatment of injured servants, and the servants are required to contribute from their wages to the support of the hospital, the master becomes liable for refusing to admit an injured servant to the hospital. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Gheen, 112 Ky. 695.

Seamen. — By the maritime law, when a seaman is injured in the service of his ship, without fault on his part, he is entitled to medical care, nursing, and attendance, and to a cure, so far as a cure is possible, at the expense of the ship. The Troy, 121 Fed. Rep. 901. See the title SEAMAN, vol. 25, p. 126 et seq.

See the title FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 12, p. 909 et seq.

It is the duty of the master to discharge a servant when he knows, or by the exercise of reasonable diligence would know, that the servant has contracted the habit or character of negligence, of drunkenness, or of lack of skill, so that he is incompetent. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Hetzer, (C. C. A.) 135 Fed. Rep. 272.

Duty to Exercise Special Supervision. — Ordinarily there seems to be no duty resting upon the master, to be discharged by him, or by an agent standing in his place, to exercise special supervision over the work in which his servants are engaged. Roytio v. Litchfield, (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. Rep. 240.

West Virginia. — Cochran v. Shanahan, 51 W. Va. 137.

Canada. — Dugal v. Peoples Bank, 34 N. Bruns. 581.

In order that it may be said that a case of actionable negligence has been made out, it must appear that the conditions and circumstances were such that the defendant ought to have foreseen that such an accident might happen, or, if such an accident could reasonably have been anticipated, that there was an omission to provide against it. Branco v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 119 Iowa 211.

It has been held to be error to charge that, where an employer has agreed to furnish an employee a harness sufficiently strong to enable him to control a certain horse, the employer is thereby made an insurer of the quality of the harness furnished, and that he is not in the exercise of ordinary care unless he makes his assurance good. Robert Portner Brewing Co. v. Cooper, 116 Ga. 171.

Unforeseen Accidents. — See infra, cases supplementing page 132, note 3.

Care Required in Employing Servants. — When a master has exercised reasonable care to employ competent servants, his duty with respect to the employment of competent servants is discharged. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Hetzer, (C. C. A.) 135 Fed. Rep. 272.

The diligence required of the master to learn the habits or characters of servants employed with due care is not of that degree demanded in his employment of servants or in his inspection of machinery, because careful and skilful men grow more careful and skilful, and the legal presumption is that servants once competent continue so. The master may rely upon the presumption of competency until he has notice or knowledge to the contrary.

Duty as to Telegraph Poles. — It has been held that it was the duty of a railroad company to equip its telegraph system in the first instance in such a manner that the poles would furnish a reasonably safe place for its employees to work upon in stringing, repairing, altering, or removing the wires. Riker v. New York, etc., R. Co., 64 N. Y. App. Div. 357.

Degree of Care. — The obligation of the master as to furnishing the employee a safe place to work is discharged by the exercise of reasonable care. Fuller v. Ann Arbor R. Co., (Mich. 1905) 104 N. W. Rep. 414, 12 Detroit Leg. N. 348.

On the ground that it is the duty of the master to use ordinary care only in providing a reasonably safe place for his servant to work, and to use in going to and from his work, it was held to be error to instruct the jury, in an action by a servant against his master to recover for personal injuries, that it was the absolute duty of the defendant to afford the plaintiff a reasonably safe passageway to and from his work. Himrod Coal Co. v. Clingan, 114 Ill. App. 568.

In a case in which the jury were told that it was the duty of the defendant to provide a safe place for the plaintiff to work in, and if, in this respect, there was negligence, plaintiff was entitled to recover, it was held that the instruction was erroneous in that the duty of the defendant was said to be to provide an absolutely, and not a reasonably, safe place in which to work. Greeley v. Foster, 32 Colo. 292.

In an action in which it was admitted that the work place was dangerous, it was held that the defendant was not injured by an instruction that "it is the duty of the employer to furnish a suitable and safe place for his employees to work," although the true rule is that the place must be reasonably suitable and safe. Grijalva v. Southern Pac. Co., 137 Cal. 569.

57. See notes 1, 2, 3, 4.

Proximate Cause of Injury.—To render a master liable for injuries sustained by servants through his negligence in failing to provide and maintain a safe place to work, the negligence of the master must have been the proximate cause of the injuries. In re Michigan Steamship Co., 133 Fed. Rep. 577.

The principle of a safe place does not apply when the prosecution of the work itself makes the place and creates its dangers. Brown v. Terry, 67 N. Y. App. Div. 223.

It has been held that the rule that the law does not compel the master to keep the place where the servant works at all times safe when the work being done is of such a character as necessarily renders the place temporarily, or from time to time, insecure, had no application in an action to recover for personal injuries sustained by a miner by the caving in of a stope which was in a certain sense a completed chamber, under ground, through which men were expected to pass, and in which they were required to work, and in which it also appeared that the plaintiff's injuries were not occasioned by any work which he was doing which made the place insecure. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co. v. Pouch, (C. C. A.) 124 Fed. Rep. 148.

Place in Which to Work Provided by Injured Servant. — If the servant is himself engaged in making the place in which to work at the time of his injury, and is solely responsible for its creation, condition, and care, then, of course, the rule as to the duty of the master to furnish his employee with a safe place in which to work does not apply. Thayer v. Smoky Hollow Coal Co., 121 Iowa 121.

Servant Charged with Duty of Making Place Safe. — When the work of the servant is to render safe a place which is unsafe, the rule requiring the master to provide a safe place in which to work does not apply. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Billingslea, (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. Rep. 335; Kansas, etc., Coal Co. v. Chandler, 71 Ark. 518; Kellogg v. Denver City Tramway Co., 18 Colo. App. 475; Jennings v. Ingle, 35 Ind. App. 153; Indiana, etc., Coal Co. v. Batey, 34 Ind. App. 16. See infra, this title, the cases supplementing page 82, note 1.

Whenever a servant is employed to work in the construction, alteration, or repair of any place or thing where the work as it is being prosecuted involves the construction of the place itself, the master fulfils his duty to the servant when he furnishes reasonably safe material and appliances for the performance of the work and selects competent servants to do it. Greeley v. Foster, 32 Colo. 292.

Removing Wreck on Railroad. — It has been said that since the business of clearing away and removing a wreck on a railroad is to make the place safe, it would seem that as to that work the doctrine that it is the duty of the master to use reasonable care in making the working place of his servant reasonably safe would not apply. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Hunsucker, 33 Ind. App. 27.

Tearing Down Building. — The rule that a master must furnish to the servant a reasonably safe place in which to work, as applied in ordinary cases, does not apply to the work of tearing down a building. Western Wrecking, etc., Co. v. O'Donnell, 101 Ill. App. 492; Merchant v. Mickelson, 101 Ill. App. 401; Chicago Edison Co. v. Davis, 93 Ill. App. 284, affirmed 195 Ill. 31.

An employer does not undertake and is not required to make a building in process of destruction safe at all times for the workmen who are expressly employed to make it insecure by tearing it down. But it is nevertheless the master's duty to notify the employee of any latent defect or danger existing at the place where he is employed to work, which increases the ordinary risk of his employment, if the defect or danger is not known to the servant, or is not so open and visible that by ordinary care it would be so seen and known. McFarland v. Edmunds Mfg. Co., 97 Ill. App. 629.

Work of Erecting or Repairing Buildings. — It has been declared in effect that it is well settled that the rule with reference to providing a suitable and safe place for the use of employees does not apply to buildings in course of erection or under repair, in the same way as to those which are complete and in use for practical purposes; in view of the fact that the contingencies of construction or repair are constantly changing, the obligation of the master to exercise care to provide a safe place to work is not the same that is ordinarily required. Fournier v. Pike, 128 Fed. Rep. 991.

Place Rendered Dangerous by Servants. — If the place provided by the master is reasonably safe, but is rendered dangerous because of the manner in which the details of the work are executed by the workmen, the master is not liable. United States. — Deye v. Lodge, etc., Mach. Tool Co., (C. C. A.) 137 Fed. Rep. 480.

Texas. — Direct Nav. Co. v. Anderson, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 65; Wells v. Page, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 489.

It has been held that if one class of servants negligently constructs an unsafe place for another class of servants to work in, one of the first class cannot recover from the master for injuries sustained by him, caused by such negligence, while working in such place, although at the time he may have joined the other class of servants, and been engaged with them in doing work in no manner connected with preparing the place to work in. Litchfield v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 73 N. Y. App. Div. 1.

Adjustment of Simple Appliances. — It has been held that the responsibility of the master to exercise care to give a safe place in which to work does not extend to the adjustment of simple and merely temporary appliances for doing the work. Galow v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A.) 131 Fed. Rep. 242.

Place Rendered Unsafe by Third Person. — A master is not liable for failure to provide a safe place in which to work where the place is safe, and is only made unsafe by the negligent act of a third person for which the master is not liable. Penner v. Vinton Co., (Mich. 1905) 104 N. W. Rep. 385, 12 Detroit Leg. N. 381.

Place to Which Duty Extends. — A master's duty in respect to furnishing his servants a safe place in which to work extends to such parts of his premises only as he has prepared for their occupancy while doing his work, and to such other parts as he knows or ought to know they are accustomed to use while doing it. Morrison v. Burgess Sulphite-Fibre Co., 70 N. H. 406, 85 Am. St. Rep. 634; Edwards v. Tilton Mills, 70 N. H. 574.

The duty of a master respecting the provision of a safe place of work for his workman extends to providing a reasonably safe mode of entrance to and exit from the place where the workman is employed. Haber v. Jenkins Rubber Co., (N. J. 1905) 61 Atl. Rep. 382.

Place Where Servants Are Accustomed to Go. — In an action to recover for the death of a miner alleged to have been caused by his coming in contact with an insufficiently insulated wire in a passage through which he was passing in returning to his station in the mine from the room of a fellow workman where he had spent part of the noon hour visiting, it was held that, while it was error to treat the case as one turning upon the duty owing by the employer to the employee injured in the course of his duty, yet since there was evidence that the place in which the plaintiff's intestate was killed was a place where the miners were accustomed to go at noon for the purpose of eating their dinners and for social intercourse, and the owner had knowledge of and did not object to the practice, the plaintiff's intestate occupied the situation of a licensee. Ellsworth v. Metheney, 104 Fed. Rep. 119, 44 C. C. A. 484, 51 L. R. A. 389.

When a safe mode of entrance and exit is furnished, evidence of the use by some of the workmen of another mode of entering and leaving the place of employment will not impose a duty upon the employer to care for the safety of a workman who deviates from the path which such workman had been accustomed to use, and proceeds to another part of the grounds out of mere idle curiosity. When out of the path provided or customarily used, the employer owes the workman no duty of a higher degree than that which is due to a licensee. Haber v. Jenkins Rubber Co., (N. J. 1905) 61 Atl. Rep. 382.

The duty of a master to furnish a reasonably safe place in which the servant is to perform his labor extends to the necessary incidents of that labor. It has been held that where the employees in the defendant's brewery had been accustomed to repair to a certain place in the brewery to change their clothes, and the defendant had knowledge, through its representatives at least, of the custom prevailing in its establishment, the duty arose of exercising a reasonable degree of care that the place used was reasonably safe. Muhlen v. Obermeyer, 83 N. Y. App. Div. 88.

Passageway Not Provided by Master. — McKean v. Colorado Fuel, etc., Co., 18 Colo. App. 285.

Leased Premises. — The duty of a master to exercise care to furnish a safe place to work is, as between master and servant, absolute, and the master cannot absolve himself from responsibility in that behalf by showing that the premises furnished by him were rented from a third person, and were jointly occupied by him with other tenants. Dieters v. St. Paul Gas-light Co., 86 Minn. 474.

Responsibility of Lessor of Mine for Safety of Place to Work. — Union Gold Min. Co. v. Crawford, 29 Colo. 511.

Work to Be Performed on Premises of Third Person. — It has been held that there is a difference in the obligation of the employer in the manner of furnishing a suitable place for the employee to work where it is to be done upon the premises of a third party, and where it is to be done at the shop or factory of the employer. The employee in this case must inform himself of the dangers of doing the work, and if he knows the danger, or by the exercise of reasonable care would know the danger, connected with the work, he is deemed to have assumed it. Shadle v. Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., 12 Ohio Cir. Dec. 37, 22 Ohio Cir. Ct. 49.

Overheated Building.—It has been held that for a result so unusual and extraordinary as being overcome by heat while at work in the defendant's engine shed the plaintiff could not recover where the evidence justified the conclusion that the heated condition of the air in the engine shed was due partly to the heat of the outside atmosphere, and not alone to the absence of sufficient ventilation. *Western Stone Co. v. It has been held that the master is under no obligation to keep his premises so lighted that all repair work may be done without the necessity of additional light. If such additional light is needed for repair work and the servant, instead of procuring it, undertakes to do the work without it, and is injured, he cannot recover against the master. *Schoultz v. The foreman of a switching crew in the yard of a railway company was walking a few feet in advance and to the side of the rear of a train of backing cars, signaling to the engineer, when the rear car was derailed by low joints in the track, veered upon and killed him. These low joints were opposite each other, had existed for six months, and the fish plates upon them were loose. They were at a busy place in the yard, where during daylight the wheels of about 600 cars pounded over them daily. They were perceptible to one riding over them upon a train, but they were at a street crossing, which was planked, and there was no evidence that the foreman had ever examined them, or that he knew the condition of the fish plates. It was held that the questions of negligence, assumption of risk, and contributory negligence were for the jury. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Benton, (C. C. A.) 132 Fed. Rep. 460.

Logging Railroad.— Although a logging railroad is not expected or required to be laid with the same care and security, nor to be operated with the same degree of prudence, as is demanded in the construction and operation of railway tracks in use by common carriers, nevertheless such road should be so constructed and operated as to render it reasonably safe for those whose employment necessitates their going upon such road and performing service in connection with the same. *Lynn v. In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Lee, 29 Ind. App. 480, it was said that "we think the rule might be stated that the employer must exercise ordinary skill and care to provide a safe working place, or the employer must exercise skill and care to provide an ordinarily safe working place."

But on the other hand it has been held that it was error to instruct a jury in effect that a railroad company is under a duty to keep its track in a reasonably safe condition for the use of its employees. The court said: "The duty which the law imposes upon the company is to exercise reasonable watchfulness and care in inspecting its tracks and in keeping them in a reasonably safe condition. The law does not impose the absolute duty to keep them in a reasonably safe condition." Culver v. South Haven, etc., R. Co., 138 Mich. 443, 11 Detroit Leg. N. 642.

Failure to Use Stop-blocks. — It seems that the failure to equip a side track with a "bumping post" or other obstruction may, together with other facts, be taken into consideration by the jury in deciding whether the premises were reasonably safe. Gila Valley, etc., R. Co. v. Lyon, (Ariz. 1903) 71 Pac. Rep. 957.

In an action to recover for the death of a brakeman alleged to have resulted from the negligence of the defendant in not providing, at a certain point on its road, a sufficiently long side track or switch to accommodate a long train, without danger of running off the end thereof which was raised five and one-half feet from the ground, on a trestle, and in not having provided at the end of the side track a sufficient bumper or obstruction by which a train backed thereon might be checked from running off, it was held that the jury was justified in finding that the defendant had been negligent. *Pennsylvania R. It has been held that a railway company which is engaged in constructing a new switch is not required to block the frog during the progress of construction. Hauss v. Lake Erie, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A.) 105 Fed. Rep. 733.

The rule has been stated in effect as follows: So long as blocked and unblocked frogs are in use on railroads and many roads prefer those that are unblocked, and it is questionable which is the safest or most suitable appliance for the business of railroads, a jury cannot impute negligence to a company which uses one of these appliances in preference to the other. Kilpatrick v. Choctaw, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. Rep. 11.

Use of Blocking of Unusual but Reasonable Size. — A railway company used a piece of lumber one inch thicker, six inches wider, and one foot longer than the customary blocking to fill the space between the guard rail and a main rail. It was held that the use of this blocking of unusual size was but the rightful exercise of the judgment of the company, and was no evidence of negligence or of liability for an injury resulting from a brakeman's stumbling over it. *Morris v. Bridge Controlled by Municipality. — A street car company, when using a city bridge for its tracks, thereby adopts such bridge as one of its appliances, and if such company knows, or by the exercise of reasonable care could know, that such bridge is in a defective and unsafe condition, and liable to give way and fall by reason of such condition, and knowingly causes or permits its cars to be run over such bridge, and the bridge gives way and falls because of said defective condition, while cars of such company are in the act of crossing, and its employees in charge of the cars, or upon them, in the line of their employment, are, without negligence on their part, injured in the fall of such cars, such employees would be entitled to recover for injuries so received. Indianapolis v. Cauley, 164 Ind. 304.

68. 1. What Degree of Care Sufficient. — Erie R. Co. v. McCormick, 69 Ohio St. 45; Texas Mexican R. Co. v. Mendez, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 78 S. W. Rep. 25.

In an action to recover for personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff, a brakeman in the employ of the defendant railroad company, by the breaking of a trestle alleged to have been defective, it was said that if defendant exercised ordinary care in the construction of the trestle — that is, if it was built in the manner that an ordinarily prudent man would have built it, if he himself had intended to use it in the way the plaintiff was using it, then the defendant performed its full duty toward its servant. *Dolan v. 4. Duty as to Construction of Covered Bridges. — Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Tucker, 65 S. W. Rep. 453, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1929.

Width of Bridges. — If the employees of a railroad company are required to be on the side of its cars in the discharge of their duty as the trains pass over bridges, it is incumbent on the company to so construct and maintain its bridges as to make them reasonably safe for such use; but if the employees are not required to be on the side of the cars at such times, the company violates no duty it owes them by failing to construct its bridges of sufficient width to permit of an employee riding on the side of a car over a bridge. *Krebbs v. Condition of Railroad Track After Accident. — Where inferences may properly be drawn as to conditions existing at the time of a derailment from the condition of the rails and timbers of the railway as they appeared shortly after the accident, evidence to prove such subsequent condition is admissible. E. E. Jackson Lumber Co. v. Cunningham, 141 Ala. 206. See Meyers v. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co., 28 Utah 96.

Condition of Place Prior to Accident. — In an action to recover for the death of the plaintiff's intestate by the falling of a building in the construction of which he was employed, it was held that under the circumstances of the case evidence of the condition of the building about six weeks before the accident was properly admitted. Nelson v. Young, 91 N. Y. App. Div. 457, affirmed 180 N. Y. 523.

6. Methods in Common Use by Other Companies as Evidence for Defendant. — Nyback v. Champagne Lumber Co., (C. C. A.) 109 Fed. Rep. 732; Southern R. Co. v. McLellan, 80 Miss. 700. See Rafferty v. Nawn, 182 Mass. 503. Compare Gruenendahl v. Consolidated Coal Co., 108 Ill. App. 644. Contra, Hansell-Elcock Foundry Co. v. Clark, 214 Ill. 399, affirming 115 Ill. App. 209; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Kinnare, 115 Ill. App. 132.

In an action to recover for injuries received by a mule driven in a mine in consequence of coming in contact with the roof or side of an entry, which was alleged to be of insufficient height, it was held that witnesses were properly permitted to testify to the custom in that particular mining district as to the height and width of entries. Hamilton v. Mendota Coal, etc., Co., 120 Iowa 147.

In an action to recover for the death of a brakeman in the employ of the defendant, alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the defendant in erecting and maintaining a stock gap in dangerous proximity to the track, it was held that the trial court erred in assuming that, subject only to the defense of contributory negligence, the plaintiff would be entitled to recover if the track and the stock gap in question were not such as were furnished on well regulated railroads generally, and if the failure to have it so was the proximate cause of the death of the plaintiff's intestate. Such failure would not necessarily and as a matter of law have established the charge of negligence. As evidential of what in the exercise of due care ought to have been done in the construction and maintenance of the roadway, it was proper to consider the usage prevailing on other well regulated railroads; but "all railroads are not required to conform to one standard," and safety may be conserved, and, therefore, the duty of care performed, by providing a roadway not in conformity with such usage. Northern Alabama R. Co. v. Mansell, 138 Ala. 548.

Usual and Customary Construction. — It has been held that where a negligent construction is alleged as the basis of an action, evidence as to the usual and customary manner of construction is inadmissible. Hansell-Elcock Foundry Co. v. Clark, 214 Ill. 399.

7. As Evidence for Plaintiff. — Schroeder v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Iowa 1905) 103 N. W. Rep. 985. Contra, Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Cleveland, 92 Ill. App. 308; Donovan v. American Linen Co., 180 Mass. 127.

But since the track of a well regulated cross-country railroad furnishes no standard of comparison, and no criterion of excellence as to a furnace company's tracks laid on its cinder pile for the sole purpose of carting off the slag from the furnace, the fact that such cinder tracks are not like the tracks of well regulated cross-country railroads is not pertinent to the issue whether the cinder tracks are defectively constructed, and throws no legitimate light upon it. Sloss-Sheffield Steel, etc., Co. v. Mobley, 139 Ala. 425, holding that the testimony of a witness that the defendant's cinder track was not like the tracks of regular cross-country roads should have been excluded.

Canadian Pac. R. Co.*, 76 Vt. 267. But see Palmer Brick Co. v. Chenall, 119 Ga. 837, in which it is said that the maxim res ipsa loquitur is applicable, under certain circumstances, in suits by a servant against his master for damages resulting from the master's negligence.

In an action to recover for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff while in the employ of the defendant in consequence of being placed at work in an unsafe place under an arch that had been unskillfully constructed, it was held that where no explanation was given as to the cause of the fall of a brick arch, the maxim res ipsa loquitur applied, and the jury might infer that there was negligence on the part of the owner, either in its original construction or in its subsequent maintenance. Chenall v. Palmer Brick Co., 117 Ga. 106.

In an action to recover for injuries sustained by the plaintiff by the falling of the roof of a building in which he was working for the defendant, it was held that the fact that the roof fell under the circumstances disclosed by the record while it was in course of construction was, until otherwise explained, prima facie evidence of the insufficiency of the building. Hearn v. Quillen, 94 Md. 39.

Where the plaintiff, who was employed in the defendant's mine, was injured while walking to his work with other workmen in the usual place and manner upon a narrow ledge of earth on the edge of a precipice, by the giving way of the earth, whereby he was precipitated into the deep opening, it was held that a prima facie case was established in the plaintiff's favor sufficient at least to require a submission to the jury. *Lentino v. Rule Applicable to Appliances Owned by Others but Which Servant Is Required to Use in Time of Duty. — Sharpley v. Wright, 205 Pa. St. 253.

The duty of a master to exercise care to furnish his servants with reasonably safe appliances is not affected by the fact that an appliance which he supplies to his servants is owned by a third person. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. McClifford, 120 Ga. 90; Ehlen v. O'Donnell, 205 Ill. 38, affirming 102 Ill. App. 141.

Sufficient Number of Servants. — It has been said that the duty to provide reasonably safe instrumentalities embraces the obligation to provide a sufficient number of servants to perform the work safely. Peterson v. American Grass Twine Co., 90 Minn. 343. See infra, this title, the cases supplementing page 91, notes 1-4.

Appliances Unsited to the Particular Work. — Gibson v. Canadian Pac. Nav. Co., 1 Alaska 407.

Customary Appliance Used by Servant. — A failure to furnish suitable appliances will justify a servant in availing himself of such necessary means to accomplish the result as are usual and customary. Instrumentalities which are usually employed will, in the absence of any means at all furnished by the master, be considered those contemplated by the master. Riverside Mills v. Jones, 121 Ga. 33.

Appliances to Be Constructed and Adjusted by Servants. — It is well settled that where certain persons are employed to do certain work, and by the contract of employment, either express or implied, such employees are to construct and adjust the appliances by which the work is to be done, the employer to furnish proper material and the employees to construct and adjust such appliances as in their judgment are necessary, the employer is not liable to such employees for any defect in the construction or adjustment of such appliances. Kerrigan v. Market St. R. Co., 138 Cal. 506.

Temporary Instrumentalities Adopted by Servants. — The plaintiff and S., the servants of the defendant, were assigned the duty of loading a pile-driver hammer upon a wagon. In doing so they used a tree standing by as a tackle post, which was uprooted, fell, and injured the plaintiff, by reason of the force applied in an attempt to swing the hammer upon the wagon by the use of the tackle. S. selected the tree and directed the work as foreman. It was held upon the special facts of this case that the tree was not an appliance furnished by the defendant, but a mere temporary instrumentality provided by the servants themselves during the progress of the work, and that in selecting the tree S. was not acting as a vice-principal. Bell v. Lang, 83 Minn. 228.

It has been said that while it is the duty of the employer to furnish reasonably safe appliances, yet when he has furnished such appliances as may by ordinary care be used without danger, or with no more danger than is necessarily incident to the character of the work, he has discharged his duty. Corletti v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 136 Cal. 642.

The master's duty in choosing materials for his servants is to use care similar to that which a man of ordinary prudence in similar business, acting for his own safety, would use in choosing such materials for himself, were he doing the work. The rule is the same whether the master buy the appliance ready made, cause it to be made, or purchase the materials and make it. Murphy v. Coney Island, etc., R. Co., 65 N. Y. App. Div. 546.

The objection to an instruction that it stated that it is the duty of a master to furnish reasonably safe tools, appliances, etc., with which his servant is to work, instead of stating to the jury that it is the duty of the master to use reasonable care in furnishing such tools and appliances, has been declared to be too subtle for practical purposes. *Chicago, etc., R. Gulf, etc., R. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 65 S. W. Rep. 83.

The degree of care required of the master in furnishing suitable appliances has been declared to be such as reasonably prudent men would exercise under similar circumstances, having in mind the danger naturally to be apprehended. Tanner v. Harper, 32 Colo. 156.

It has been said that the master is not bound to exercise that extraordinary diligence which necessarily would be demanded if he were obliged to make every instrumentality safe for any and every use to which it might suddenly and unexpectedly be applied. His duty and diligence are primarily to be decided by considering whether he has furnished an appliance or instrumentality reasonably safe and suitable for the purpose for which it is intended or might naturally be expected to be used. Babcock Bros. Lumber Co. v. Johnson, 120 Ga. 1030.

It has been held that a defendant is not to be held to the same accountability in constructing a logging road used solely for its own purposes, and on which no freight or passengers are carried, that would apply to the case of an ordinary railroad. Demko v. Carbon Hill Coal Co., (C. C. A.) 136 Fed. Rep. 162.

It has been said that in all cases reasonable care means such care as reasonable and prudent men use under like circumstances. Caven v. Bodwell Granite Co., 99 Me. 278.

And it has been said that "it is the master's duty to furnish machinery and appliances that are as safe as reasonable prudence and ordinary care can make them, not the safest and best possible, but as safe and good as may be obtained by the exercise of such care as a man of ordinary experience and prudence engaged in such work usually exercises." *Curtis v. Washington. — Roberts v. Fort Blakely Mill Co., 30 Wash. 25.

It has been said that the use of like tools and machinery in other establishments is not the test of fitness. The true test is not alone that others use them, but whether they are reasonably suitable and safe for the work to be done; and not whether other persons do in fact use them, but whether they are such as reasonably careful and prudent men would use under like circumstances. Croker v. Pusey, etc., Co., 3 Penn. (Del.) 1.

Ordinarily the fitness of a railroad appliance for special uses of one company may be tested by what is shown to be the custom of well regulated railroad companies with respect to such uses under like circumstances. But the practice of a few railroad companies, though it may tend to show what is the custom, is not conclusive upon the question as to whether there has been a performance of the master's duty. Hence a charge which makes the usage of eight other companies conclusive upon the question of negligence is erroneous as invading the province of the jury. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Jones, 130 Ala. 456.

Appliances Used by Prudent Persons in the Same Business.

It has been held that while it is true that an employer is not required to use the best possible appliances to protect his employees from danger, and while he may show in order to rebut the charge of negligence on his part that the appliances that he did use were such as were adopted and used by many prudent persons engaged in the same kind of business, yet such evidence does not exempt the employer from liability. Prudent persons may do imprudent things and may fail to use proper appliances for the safety of their employees. Davis v. Kornman, 141 Ala. 479. See Going v. Alabama Steel, etc., Co., 141 Ala. 537.

If the master has furnished complete and adequate appliances for the work, he cannot be held liable because a part of the apparatus furnished by him was joined with a thing not furnished by him, but substituted without his notice or authority, with the consequence that the part furnished by him in connection with the foreign appliance did not work safely. Hackett v. Masterson, 88 N. Y. App. Div. 73.

But when an appliance, though intended for one purpose, is used for another purpose with the knowledge and consent of the master, the rule holding the master responsible for a failure to exercise care to provide safe appliances is to be applied. Hunting v. Quarterman, 120 Ga. 344.

It has been held that in the case of an experienced employee it is necessary, to relieve the master of liability, that the servant should not only know the defect, but appreciate the danger which might result from it. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Hewitt, 102 Ill. App. 428, affirmed 202 Ill. 28.

Under the Georgia Code (Ga. Civ. Code, § 2612) although a master may be negligent in furnishing defective machinery, a servant who is injured because of the fact that it is not in a reasonably safe condition is not entitled to recover unless it appears that he "did not know and had not equal means of knowing such fact, and by the exercise of ordinary care could not have known thereof." Western, etc., R. Co. v. Moran, 116 Ga. 441; Hobbs v. Bowie, 121 Ga. 421; Cartledge v. Pierpont Mfg. Co., 120 Ga. 221; Ludd v. Wilkins, 118 Ga. 525; De Lay v. Southern R. Co., 115 Ga. 934; *Stewart v. It has been said that the mere fact that machinery is not perfect and not adapted to use under all circumstances will not necessarily prevent a recovery by the servant, resulting from the use of such machinery. If the machinery, though defective, can be safely used for certain purposes and under certain circumstances, and the servant has reason to believe that it will not be used except for such purposes and under such circumstances, he has a right to recover for injuries which he may sustain as the result of the master permitting the use of the machinery for other purposes and under other circumstances; such purposes and circumstances not being brought to the knowledge of the servant, and he not being able to inform himself of them by the use of ordinary care. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Dukes, 121 Ga. 787.

Where a scaffold is required for the purpose of sustaining the workmen and also the strain of hoisting up sections of heavy iron pipe, the weight of such pipe, and the additional weight caused by bracing up the pipe after being put into place, presumptively the ordinary workman, not familiar with the construction of scaffolds, and having no experience in such work, is not able to judge of the sufficiency of the appliance for such purpose. In such case, if the master directs such workman to go upon the scaffold and assist in handling the pipe, there is an implied agreement upon his part that the same is reasonably safe and suitable for the purpose. *Hagerty v. It has been held that the New York statute which gives a remedy against the master in favor of an employee who is injured while working on a scaffold by reason of some defect therein, has reference to a completed scaffold. Pussley v. Edgemoor Bridge Works, 56 N. Y. App. Div. 71, affirmed without opinion 168 N. Y. 589.

A scaffold constructed in a room in a factory from four to six feet above the floor, for the purpose of affixing shafting to the ceiling, has been held not to be a scaffold contemplated by the provisions of the New York statute of 1897. Schapp v. Bloomer, 181 N. Y. 125.

A vessel in course of construction in a shipyard is a "structure" within the meaning of the statute. Chaffee v. Union Dry Dock Co., 68 N. Y. App. Div. 578.

But it has been held that an iron arch used as a temporary support upon which to lay bricks of terra cotta forming the permanent arch cannot be regarded as a scaffold within the meaning of the statute. Haughey v. Thatcher, 89 N. Y. App. Div. 375.

It has been held that a scaffold which was constructed by the workmen who were to work upon it, and was in their charge and under their control, did not come within the provision of the New York statute. Rotondo v. Smyth, 92 N. Y. App. Div. 153.

The provision of the New York statute relating to scaffolds does not mean that the master, who has furnished a safe scaffold to his workmen, is bound to see that they use proper care in moving it and adjusting it from time to time as the nature of the work requires. Hutton v. Holdbrook, etc., Contracting Co., 139 Fed. Rep. 734.

But see Bair v. Heibel, 103 Mo. App. 621, in which it is said that, independently of statutory provisions, "it seems there is no rule of the common law requiring dangerous machinery to be fenced or guarded, and that the master is not answerable if a servant of full capacity is injured in consequence of working about unguarded machines."

Statutory Obligation to Guard Machinery.—Klein v. Garvey, 94 N. Y. App. Div. 183; Sitts v. Waiontha Knitting Co., 94 N. Y. App. Div. 38.

It has been held that a master could not be charged with negligence, under the New York Factory Act, in failing to guard a shaft which could be reached only by the use of a ladder. Dillon v. National Coal Tar Co., 181 N. Y. 215.

Similarly, it has been held that the provision of the New York Labor Law (N. Y. Laws 1897, p. 480, c. 415, § 18) requiring machinery to be properly guarded does not apply to shafting or machinery located about eight feet above the floor, and hence negligence cannot be imputed, as a matter of law, because of a failure to guard the shafting, although it might be a question of fact whether such machinery should be guarded or protected. Scialo v. Steffens, 105 N. Y. App. Div. 592.

And it has been held that this statute does not require an employer to cover or guard machinery in the course of construction so that persons engaged in constructing it would not be injured. Foster v. International Paper Co., 71 N. Y. App. Div. 47.

Automatic Couplers. — It is provided by the Act of Congress known as the Safety Appliance Act, approved March 2, 1893) 6 Fed. Stat. Annot. 752), in effect that common carriers engaged in interstate commerce by railroad should equip cars used in moving interstate traffic with couplers working automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars. And statutes requiring railroads to adopt automatic couplers have been enacted in several of the states.

The Act of Congress applies not only where the cars are being actually used in moving interstate commerce at the time of the injury, but also to cars which are being made up into a train for the purpose of moving interstate traffic at the time of the injury. Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Bromberg, 141 Ala. 258. The act has no application in a case in which there is no proof that the engine and cars were used in interstate commerce. Rosney v. Erie R. Co., (C. C. A.) 135 Fed. Rep. 311. It has been held that in an action to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been received in consequence of the failure of the defendant railroad company to equip cars with automatic couplers as required by Act of Congress, the question whether the cars were engaged in interstate commerce is for the jury when there is a conflict of evidence upon the point. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Filippo, 138 Ala. 487.

It has been held that the tender of a locomotive engine engaged in interstate commerce is a car within the scope of the Act of Congress which uses the general terms "locomotive," "car," or "train." Winkler v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 4 Penn. (Del.) 80; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Winkler, 4 Penn. (Del.) 387. But in Iowa, it has, on the other hand, been held that the statute (Iowa Code. §§ 2079-2089) requiring cars to be equipped with automatic couplers does not apply to engines and their tenders. Bryce v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., (Iowa 1905) 104 N. W. Rep. 483, 119 Iowa 174. And it has been held that the tender of a locomotive is not a car within the meaning of the Massachusetts statute (Mass. R. L., c. 111, § 203) requiring cars to be equipped with automatic couplers. Larabee v. New York, etc., R. Co., 182 Mass. 348. It has been held that the Ohio statute requiring railroad companies to equip their cars with automatic couplers is not applicable to electric cars or to railroads in process of construction, and the cars used for that purpose. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Somers, 24 Ohio Cir. Ct. 67.

There is not a compliance with the Act of Congress unless the cars are equipped with automatic couplers which can be coupled as well as uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars. Johnson v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 196 U. S. 1, reversing (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. Rep. 462. And it has been held that the Act of Congress and the Iowa act of 1892 (Iowa Code 1897, §§ 2097, 2080) requiring cars to be equipped with automatic couplers both apply the test of whether the person operating the coupler is required to go between the ends of the cars to the act of coupling as well as to that of uncoupling. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Voelker, (C. C. A.) 129 Fed. Rep. 522, reversing 116 Fed. Rep. 863.

In Whalin v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 112 Ill. App. 428, there is a dictum to the effect that "it would be a strained construction of the statute far beyond the contemplation and purpose of Congress in the enactment, to hold that under no circumstance or condition of convenience or necessity, cars duly equipped with automatic couplers required by the act may not be temporarily linked or coupled by special device. Were this the meaning of the law, it would be impossible to remove broken cars from a wreck, or transport them with defective couplers to the repair shop, or on other occasion, when required for the greater security of person or property, to substitute a special device or coupler."

In North Carolina it has been held, independently of statute, that it is negligence per se for a railroad company not to equip its cars with automatic couplers. Harden v. North Carolina R. Co., 129 N. Car. 354. And it has been held that engines as well as cars must be so equipped. Fleming v. Southern R. Co., 131 N. Car. 476. A failure to keep the couplers in proper condition and repair is as culpable as if the cars have never been so equipped. Elmore

It has been held that evidence of common and general use of a particular appliance is competent on the question of its reasonable safety, and also on the question whether an employer selecting and furnishing it to his employee exercised ordinary care. Anderson v. Fielding, 92 Minn. 42, 104 Am. St. Rep. 665.

And it has been said that on the question whether the use of a particular machine or appliance by a defendant is negligence, the fact that something safer has been invented and is in common use is ordinarily one of considerable significance. Dolan v. Boott Cotton Mills, 185 Mass. 576.

In an action to recover for the death of a locomotive engineer, whose death was caused by the explosion of the boiler of his engine, it was held that it was proper to permit the introduction of proof to show when the locomotive was built, and that it had during its years of service been run over half a million miles, and that four years before the explosion it collided with another engine. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Prickett, 210 Ill. 140, affirming 109 Ill. App. 468.

In an action to recover for injuries sustained on account of the sudden starting of a winding machine in a thread factory the plaintiff offered to show by a witness that about eleven weeks before the accident the witness was working on the machine, and it started of itself, after having been once stopped; that the attention of the proper employee of the defendant was called to the matter, and the machine was taken to pieces, and an attempt made to repair it, which the plaintiff contended was not effective. In holding that this evidence was properly excluded, the court said: "We are of opinion that it was within the discretion of the judge to exclude the evidence on the ground of remoteness." Gregory v. American Thread Co., 187 Mass. 239.

Evidence of Official Inspection. — In an action to recover for damages alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff in consequence of the defective condition of the defendant's elevator, it was held to be error to exclude evidence offered by the defendant to show an inspection of the elevator by a city official. *Pardridge v. Question Whether Machinery Could Be Guarded. — In an action to recover for injuries received in consequence of a failure to comply with statutory provisions requiring the guarding of machinery, it was held that evidence that a guard was provided after the accident was admissible upon the question whether the machinery was of such a character that it could be safeguarded. La Porte Carriage Co. v. Sulender, (Ind. App. 1904) 71 N. E. Rep. 922.

In an action to recover for injuries alleged to have been received on account of the defective condition of a belt, it was held that the belt was properly admitted in evidence to show the condition of the belt at the time of the accident. Boucher v. Robeson Mills, 182 Mass. 500.

When the parties to an action on trial were at issue as to whether or not a machine by which the plaintiff had been injured was, at the time he was hurt, out of order and operating in a dangerous manner, evidence tending to show that shortly thereafter, and while in substantially the same condition, this machine operated in a similar manner and by so doing injured other parties, was relevant. Georgia Cotton Oil Co. v. Jackson, 112 Ga. 620.

It has been held that where injury results from the falling of an electric light pole belonging to the city, occasioned by having become rotten beneath the surface of the ground, evidence of the condition of other poles which have been in the ground the same length of time, but taken up six months after the accident, and exposed to the atmosphere six months before the examination, is competent, as tending to show the general condition of the poles in use by the city at the time of the accident. Emporia v. Kowalski, 66 Kan. 64.

In a personal injury action, the complaint having charged that the defect in the machinery existed in certain imperfect valves improperly adjusted, and no evidence having been received at the trial tending to show that the machinery in question was defective, except that it did not work easily, plaintiff was not entitled to an instruction to the effect that it was not essential to his recovery that he be able to show the exact nature of the defect. Scarlotta v. Ash, (Minn. 1905) 103 N. W. Rep. 1025.

It has been said that the emission of particles of coal or sparks, not unusual in size or quantity, will not, alone, warrant the inference of negligence, either in the improper management of the engine or its lack of equipment with appliances of approved efficiency. Duree v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 118 Iowa 640.

It has been held that the burden is upon the plaintiff to show not only defects in the machinery, but also to show that his injury came from these defects. Trigg v. Ozark Land, etc., Co., 187 Mo. 227.

The burden is upon plaintiff to show the existence of the negligent act and injury directly resulting therefrom, and mere proof alone of negligence and injury is not sufficient without evidence tending to establish a connection between them. But when facts and circumstances are shown from which with reasonable certainty the existence of such elemental fact may be inferred, the burden of proof is sustained. Shore v. American Bridge Co., 111 Mo. App. 278.

It is necessary for the plaintiff to allege and prove a causal connection between the injury and the negligence of the master. The corollary of this rule is that, if the accident might have resulted from more than one cause, for one of which the master is liable and for the other he is not liable, it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove, in the first instance, that the injury arose from the cause for which the master is liable, for it is not the province of a court or jury to speculate or guess from which cause the accident happened. Goeransson v. Riter-Conley Mfg. Co., 186 Mo. 300.

If there is a reasonable possibility that the accident may have been due to a cause other than the alleged negligence of the defendant, it becomes the duty of the court to take the question from the jury, unless there is some evidence other than the mere happening of the accident to establish the efficacy of such negligence. Schultz v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 116 Wis. 31.

It has been said that the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur "can only be invoked, as between master and servant, if at all, where the facts not only warrant an inference of negligence, but also establish that such negligence was that of the master." Haughey v. Thatcher, 89 N. Y. App. Div. 375.

Before the maxim of res ipsa loquitur can apply, the facts and the attendant circumstances must be such as to point to some omission or commission in violation of the legal obligation due from master to servant. Moran v. Munson Steamship Line, 82 N. Y. App. Div. 489.

It has been said that while the plaintiff is bound to introduce evidence from which the jury may properly infer that the accident was caused by the defendant's negligence, he is not required to point out the particular act or omission which caused the accident. Kleibaz v. Middleton Paper Co., 180 Mass. 363.

In an action to recover for injuries caused by the sudden starting of a winding machine in a thread factory, when it had been stopped for the purpose of being cleaned, it was held that the starting of the machine was some evidence that it was in a defective condition, and it was said that "while the plaintiff was bound to introduce evidence from which the jury properly might infer that the accident was caused by the defendant's negligence, she was not required to point out the particular act or omission which caused the accident." Gregory v. American Thread Co., 187 Mass. 239.

It has been held that under the New York Labor Law (N. Y. Laws 1897, p. 467, c. 415) making it the duty of the master to use reasonable care to furnish safe appliances, when a ladder, scaffold, or other appliance mentioned in the statute breaks while in use for the purposes for which it was designed, it raises a presumption of negligence, which, unexplained, justifies a recovery. Cummings v. Kenny, 97 N. Y. App. Div. 114.

And the falling of a scaffold has been held to be prima facie evidence of negligence. Johnson v. Roach, 83 N. Y. App. Div. 351, 13 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 86.

In an action to recover for the death of the plaintiff's intestate, while in the employ of the defendants, by the falling of a derrick, it was held that the fall of the derrick afforded prima facie evidence of the negligence of the defendants. Gorman v. Milliken, (Supm. Ct. Tr. T.) 42 Misc. (N. Y.) 336, affirmed without opinion 102 N. Y. App. Div. 617.

railway company by a servant to recover for personal injuries sustained by the derailment of a train no presumption of negligence arises from the fact of the derailment of the train. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. O'Brien, (C. C. A.) 132 Fed. Rep. 593. But in North Carolina it has been held that where there is a derailment of railroad cars a presumption of negligence arises. Wright v. Southern R. Co., 127 N. Car. 225.

Rule under Ohio Statute. — In Ohio it is by statute (Bates' Annot. Stat., § 3365-21) provided, in effect, that when the fact of a defective appliance upon a railroad car or locomotive shall be made to appear on the trial of an action by an employee to recover for personal injuries, the same shall be prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the corporation. O'Connell v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. Rep. 989.

By this statute the burden of proof of want of knowledge of an existing defect and of due diligence in ascertaining it is cast upon the railroad company. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Burris, (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. Rep. 882; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Stone, 24 Ohio Cir. Ct. 192.

Electric Wire Poles. — It has been held that a telegraph company owes its linemen the duty of inspecting the poles upon which they are required to work. Tracy v. Western Union Tel. Co., 110 Fed. Rep. 103.

But it has, on the other hand, been held that an electric railway company does not owe a lineman in its employ any duty to inspect the poles which the lineman is called upon to ascend in the course of his work to see whether they are decayed and unsafe. Kellogg v. Denver City Tramway Co., 18 Colo. App. 475.

It has been said that "a master must make such inspection as ordinary prudence requires, involving the use of such tests as are known to him to be called for, or as are so commonly employed in such inspections that he might reasonably be deemed to have known of them." McGrath v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 69 N. J. L. 331, affirming 68 N. J. L. 425.

Although it may be the duty of a master to examine hoisting gear used in loading and unloading a vessel, every time it is taken down and put up, there is no obligation to take the structure apart on each of these examinations. The King Gruffydd, (C. C. A.) 131 Fed. Rep. 189.

In a case in which the accident resulted from the removal by a servant of a safeguard which the master had provided, it was said that the master "was under no obligation to inspect what it had no reason to believe any one of its employees would interfere with, and which he had no right to interfere with." Schwandt v. William Wright Co., 126 Mich. 609.

Inspection by Other Railroad Company. — In an action to recover for the death of the plaintiff's intestate, while in the employ of the defendant as an engineer, due to the alleged defective condition of the engine, it was said that it was competent for the defendant company to prove the general custom of well regulated and prudently managed railroad companies with reference to the time and manner of making inspections of their engines and boilers. It was held that it was proper to sustain an objection to the following question propounded by the defendant's counsel: "What was the usual time of railroad companies for inspecting engines?" The inquiry, it was said, should have been limited to the custom of well regulated and prudently managed companies. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Prickett, 210 Ill. 140, affirming 109 Ill. App. 468.

It has been held that it is the duty of a corporation, when it employs inexperienced men and places them in dangerous positions directly under others having the direction and control of dangerous appliances, to give the latter notice of the fact of such inexperience, and caution them as to the necessity of exercising special caution towards assuring their safety. Evans v. Louisiana Lumber Co., 111 La. 534.

Obstructions on Railway Track.—Rogers v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 211 Ill. 126.

Dangers Along the Line of a Railway by Extraordinary Storms.—It has been held that where an extraordinary storm had produced and was producing landslides and washouts along the line of the defendant's railway, it was the duty of the company to warn trainmen on trains which were sent out, of the dangers which might be encountered. Mercantile Trust Co. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. Rep. 475.

Presence of Explosives.—It has been held that it was the duty of a master to warn a servant of a large quantity of a high explosive at or near the place where the servant was at work. Robinson Min. Co. v. Tolbert, 132 Ala. 462.

Warnings During Blasting Operations.—It has been held that it is the duty of a master who is engaged in blasting operations to give his servants warning of coming blasts. Orman v. Salvo, (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. Rep. 233.

Perfect Condition of Dangerous Appliance.—The master is not necessarily relieved of the duty to warn and instruct the servant by the mere fact that the appliance from which the danger arises is in perfect working order, if the danger be not open and obvious. Fletcher Bros. Co. v. Hyde, (Ind. App. 1905) 75 N. E. Rep. 9.

Delegation of Duty to Warn and Instruct Servants.—The duty of a master to warn and instruct his servants is a primary duty of the master, and the delegation thereof to one of his servants cannot relieve him of the responsibility imposed upon him by law. Mercantile Trust Co. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. Rep. 475. See the title FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 12, p. 969.

Duty of Contractor.—It has been held that where a person in control of premises engages a contractor to do work thereon, the contractor will not be liable to his employees on account of the unsafe condition of the place, in the absence of actual notice of a defect, unless he has specially, or upon facts found impliedly, assumed such obligation. *Roche v. It has been said that "no duty is imposed upon the master to caution his servant against dangers incident to his work, as to which the master has no better information than his servant, or as to which there is [no] reason why the master should be better informed than the servant." Roessler, etc., Chemical Co. v. Peterson, (C. C. A.) 134 Fed. Rep. 789.

Dangers Arising from Negligence of Fellow Servants.—A master has a right to presume that competent employees will not be negligent in their work, and is not under a duty to inform a servant of possible or probable dangers that will arise in case of negligence on the part of his fellow employees. Klos v. Hudson River Ore, etc., Co., 77 N. Y. App. Div. 566.

The master has a right to assume that a competent servant whom he places in charge of work will perform his duty properly, and is not required to inform his other servants that he may not, and is not called upon to explain what the result may be in case he does not, or to instruct them as to what they should do in case he performs some detail of the work in a negli-

Knowledge of Servant's Inexperience.—It has been held that a master is entitled to rely upon the representations of a servant that he is a skilled and experienced workman, and that he knows and appreciates the dangers liable to arise from the operation of the machines in common use. Saucier v. New Hampshire Spinning Mills, 72 N. H. 292.

In New Jersey the rule is declared to be that the liability or responsibility of a master to instruct a servant as to the danger of employment arises only when the servant is himself ignorant, and when the master knows the fact, or ought to know it. Tompkins v. Marine Engine, etc., Co., 70 N. J. L. 330.

It has been said that the duty of cautioning a servant rests upon the master only in case he is informed or has reason to believe that the servant is inexperienced and ignorant of the probable dangers he is about to encounter. The master, in the absence of such information, may assume that an applicant who is apparently mature and intelligent is qualified for the particular work applied for by him. "It is only where such facts are brought to his notice of the disqualification of the servant to safely encounter dangers known to him, and presumptively unknown to the servant, that the duty of cautioning and instructing the servant arises." Instruction as to Mode of Doing Work. — It has been said that when the work which an employee is set to do may be done in different ways, one of which is dangerous but the others are shown by experience to be safe, then the inexperienced employee is entitled to instruction as to the way in which the work ought to be done. Brislin v. Kingston Coal Co., 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 234.

Work Not Requiring Experience or Instruction. — It is not the duty of a master to warn an inexperienced servant of the dangers liable to be encountered by him in the performance of his duties where experience and instruction are not necessary to enable him to do with safety the work he is employed or required to perform. Ford v. Bodcaw Lumber Co., 73 Ark. 49.

Obvious Dangers. — If the servant is ignorant and inexperienced, it is a duty to warn him of dangers not obvious to one without experience, but there is no duty to notify or instruct him as to dangers which are open and apparent to every person. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Bell, 209 Ill. 25.

Knowledge by Master of Inexperience of Servant. — There is no duty to instruct when the master does not and ought not to know or take notice of the youth or inexperience of the servant. Ford v. Bodcaw Lumber Co., 73 Ark. 49.

And it has been held that where a person of apparent maturity and of average capacity solicits a particular kind of work, the master has a right, in the absence of information to the contrary, to assume that the applicant is qualified for the particular work applied for. Winkler v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 4 Penn. (Del.) 80.

Undoubtedly an employer, in the absence of other evidence, would be justified in assuming that one who represented himself as competent for a particular line of work did not need cautioning and instructing in that line. But if an employer knows that a servant, to whom he assigns a particular work involving peculiar dangers, and requiring experience and skill to avoid the danger which he knows the servant will encounter, has not had the experience necessary to enable him to comprehend and avoid such dangers, he cannot absolve himself from the duty of cautioning and instructing such servant, although the servant represents himself as altogether qualified. It is the knowledge of the master of the inexperience and disqualification of the servant regarding dangers known to the master which fastens upon the latter the duty of taking reasonable care that the servant shall not sustain an injury through such known inexperience. Felton v. Girardy, (C. C. A.) 104 Fed. Rep. 127.

The duty of a master to instruct a youthful or inexperienced servant is limited by the right of the master to presume, in the absence of knowledge to the contrary, that the servant has the knowledge, discretion, and experience of the average servant of his age and intelligence. Punkowski v. New Castle Leather Co., 4 Penn. (Del.) 544.

Where There Are Two Ways of Doing a Duty. — In an action to recover for personal injuries which were received by the plaintiff, a boy seventeen years old, while at work on a planing machine in the defendant's mill, it was held that where the work is to be done by machinery with the operation of which the employee is not acquainted, and there is a safe way and an unsafe way, the employer, if he has reason to know that the employee is unskilled, is required to give him instructions for operating it in the way by which he will avoid injury. *Wright v. It has been held that where a railroad bridge or trestle has been injured by fire, if the conductor and engineer on a train are informed of the burning, and of the number of the bridge or trestle, and the mileposts between which it is located, the notice is sufficient. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Mize, 71 Ark. 159.

Where a cotton mill company posted notices in a place where they could be read by the employees, warning them as to how they should dress, etc., it was held that the warning was sufficient; it was not necessary to call the attention of each operative to the notice. Daniels v. New England Cotton Yarn Co., 188 Mass. 260.

It has been held that a servant who is engaged to help in the operation of setting a die on a press while the press is not in use need not be instructed by the master either in the management of the machine or in the use of a safety device which forms part of the machine. Kasadarian v. James Hill Mfg. Co., 130 Fed. Rep. 62.

familiarity with all the surroundings and conditions in each particular case." Strattner v. Wilmington City Electric Co., 3 Penn. (Del.) 245.

Servant's Ignorance of Language in Which Warning Given.—It has been said that it may well be questioned whether an employer, giving an order or warning to a gang of men of whose nationality or knowledge of the language he has no knowledge, can be said to be guilty of negligence in law or fact, merely because he does not call up each man separately and question him as to whether he understands the English language so as to comprehend what is said. There may be cases where, independently of whether the men understand the language or not, the risk is so great, the danger so imminent, that it would become the duty of the master to take special pains to see to it that every man is cautioned before he undertakes some work of difficulty and danger, which the master knows or ought to know about and which the servant is not capable of understanding or appreciating. But in ordinary cases, unless the master's attention is called to the fact that one or more of his employees do not understand the language of the country sufficiently to comprehend his order or warning, it may well be doubted whether he is guilty of negligence or want of ordinary care, if he assumes that his employees all understand an order or warning plainly given in the vernacular. *Lobstein v. 109. 3. In a suit against a railway company by an employee, a rule of the company relative to the duty of such employee is admissible in evidence in behalf of the company without first proving that the employee had knowledge of the rule. Such knowledge may be shown either before or after the admission of the rule in evidence. Binion v. Georgia Southern, etc., R. Co., 111 Ga. 878.

4. Knowledge of Fellow Servant. — Springs v. Southern R. Co., 130 N. Car. 186.

5. Continued Existence of Rule. — Frounfelker v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 74 N. Y. App. Div. 224.

6. Waiver of Rule — Habitual Violation. — Compare Clark v. Manhattan R. Co., 77 N. Y. App. Div. 284.

It has been said that proof of habitual violation by others in the same line of employment is admissible as affecting the question of ordinary care. The theory is that although the employee at the time of taking employment was given such a rule and promised to obey it, yet by its subsequent and habitual violation by others, he is led to the belief that it has been abrogated. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Myers, 95 Ill. App. 578.

On an issue whether a rule of a railway company, which it claimed an employee had expressly contracted to observe, had been rescinded or abrogated by general nonobservance on the part of its employees, with knowledge or acquiescence of the company, it was error for the court to refuse to instruct the jury, when duly requested by the company so to do, that they should not consider such nonobservance occurring prior to the date of the contract. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Goodwin, 120 Ga. 83.

of a rule of the company, of which he had notice and by which he was bound, and which required him to use a "stick" in making all couplings, evidence that the conductor in charge of the train at the time the injuries were received, and other conductors of the defendant company under whom the plaintiff worked, knew that he had no "stick," was properly excluded, there being nothing to impute such knowledge of the conductors to the defendant so as to give rise to the presumption that by acquiescence in the violation of the rule the company had consented to its abrogation. *Binion v. 109. 8. Presumption that Master Has Discharged His Duty. — Rosney v. Erie R. Co., (C. C. A.) 135 Fed. Rep. 311.

Presumption as to Adoption of Rules. — It has been held that when the plaintiff relies upon the absence of rules as a basis of the charge of negligence, the burden is upon him to prove affirmatively the want of such rules, since the presumption is that such rules as were necessary were prescribed. Hill v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 72 N. H. 518; Smith v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (N. H. 1905) 61 Atl. Rep. 359; Corcoran v. New York, etc., R. Co., 58 N. Y. App. Div. 606.

Presumption for Collision. — In an action to recover for the death of a locomotive engineer in the defendant's service, caused by a collision between trains, it was held that a presumption of negligence arose from the fact of the collision. *Stewart v. Negligence of Fellow Servants.—See the title FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 12, p. 902, note 4.

When the employer, or those representing him, has provided a place which is reasonably safe in itself, and has furnished reasonably safe tools and appliances and reasonably competent fellow workmen, then the risk incident to the progress of the work as carried on by the employees is assumed by virtue of the employment, and for an injury received in the prosecution of the work in such place with such appliances and in connection with such fellow workmen the employee cannot recover from the employer. McQueeney v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 120 Iowa 522.

It has been said that a servant impliedly assumes the risks and hazards incident to the service he contracts to render, and, in the absence of knowledge to the contrary, an employer may assume, as between the master and the servant, that one applying for a particular employment possesses the skill and judgment requisite to the safe and proper performance of his duty. Felton v. Girardy, (C. C. A.) 104 Fed. Rep. 127.

Infant Employees.—The rule of the assumption of the ordinary risks incident to an employment applies to infants as well as adults. Evans Laundry Co. v. Crawford, 67 Neb. 153.

But it has been held that, under the New York law (N. Y. Laws 1897, p. 477, c. 415) prohibiting the employment of children under the age of fourteen years in factories, a child under the prescribed age cannot be held to have assumed the risk of an employment contrary to the statute. Lee v. Sterling Silk Mfg. Co., (Supm. Ct. Tr. T.) 47 Misc. (N. Y.) 182. See Sitts v. Waiontha Knitting Co., 94 N. Y. App. Div. 38.

Negligence of Fellow Servants.—One who enters the service of another assumes all the ordinary risks and dangers of that service, and one of those risks is the danger of injury from the negligence of fellow servants. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Hetzer, (C. C. A.) 135 Fed. Rep. 272.

Limitation of the Rule.—The doctrine in regard to the assumption of risk by an employee applies only to the natural and ordinary risks incident to the work in which the servant is engaged. Landgraf v. Kuh, 188 Ill. 484; Wabash R. Co. v. Bhymer, 112 Ill. App. 225, reversed on other points 214 Ill. 579.

It has been said that "it is only such injuries as have arisen after the exercise of that diligence and care on the part of the master, that can properly be termed accidents or casualties which the servant has impliedly agreed to risk, and for which the master is not liable." Illinois Steel Co. v. McFadden, 196 Ill. 344, 89 Am. St. Rep. 319.

"An employee does not assume all the risks incident to his employment, but only such as are usual, ordinary, and remain so incident after the master has taken reasonable care to prevent or remove them, or if extraordinary, such as are so obvious and expose him to danger so imminent that an ordinarily prudent and careful man would anticipate injury as so probable that in view of it he would not enter upon or remain in the employment." Riverton Coal Co. v. Shepherd, 207 Ill. 395; Chicago Hair, etc., Co. v. Mueller, 203 Ill. 558, affirming 106 Ill. App. 21; Malott v. Hood, 201 Ill. 202, affirming 99 Ill. App. 360; Illinois Terminal R. Co. v. Thompson, 210 Ill. 226, affirming 112 Ill. App. 463.

It cannot be said that danger from branches of trees which a railroad company permits to hang over its tracks so low that they come in contact with employees while engaged in their duties on the tops of the cars is a danger incident to the service. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Parish, 28 Ind. App. 189, 91 Am. St. Rep. 120.

Incompetency of Fellow Servants.—The wrongful employment of incompetent fellow servants is not one of the common and obvious hazards assumed by a servant. Hall v. Bedford Quarries Co., 156 Ind. 460.

Negligence of Other Servants Who Are Not Fellow Servants.—A servant does not assume the risk of a negligent manner of doing the work by other servants who are not his fellow servants unless it is customary to do the work in that manner. The risk of such an act is not one of the usual or ordinary hazards of the employment. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. White, 209 Ill. 124.

111. See note 1.

112. b. PATENT AND OBVIOUS DEFECTS AND DANGERS — (1) General Rule. — See note 1.

Convict Laborers. — The doctrine of assumption of risks does not apply to convicts who are leased out by the state without their consent and without their free will being exercised in the matter. Simonds v. Georgia Iron, etc., Co., 133 Fed. Rep. 776, affirmed without opinion (C. C. A.) 133 Fed. Rep. 1019.

Previous Happening of Similar Accident. — The question whether an accident or injury is included in the risks of the employment is to be determined from the question whether it is an accident or injury liable to issue in the ordinary prosecution of the business, and it is not necessary to the assumption of such risks that the same accident should have happened before. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. White, 209 Ill. 124.

114. 1. Risks Incident to Slacking Time. — Roessler, etc., Chemical Co. v. Peterson, (C. C. A.) 134 Fed. Rep. 789.

Lineman — Falling of Decayed and Weak Poles. — Kellogg v. Denver City Tramway Co., 18 Colo. App. 475.

Risks Incident to Duties of Flagman. — A flagman in the employ of a railroad company assumes the risks ordinarily incident to his crossing the tracks in going to and from work. O'Neil v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 130 Fed. Rep. 204.

Injuries to Track Hands, Section Hands, or Laborers. — As a general rule, section men assume the risks of being injured by approaching trains. Murren v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 86 Minn. 470.

Passing of Train at High Speed Without Signal or Whistle. — Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Wild, 109 Ill. App. 38.

Basis of Doctrine of Assumption of Risks. — The doctrine of assumption of risks is placed by the authorities and sustained upon two grounds. The first ground is the maxim Volenti non fit injuria. A servant is not compelled to begin or to continue to work for his master. Ordinarily, he does not work for him under a contract for a stated time. He is at liberty to retire from his employment, and his master is free to discharge him, at any time. The latter constantly offers him day by day his wages, his place to work, and the appliances which he is to use. The former day by day voluntarily accepts them. By the continuing acceptance of the work and the wages, he voluntarily accepts and assumes the risk of the defects and dangers which a person of ordinary prudence in his place would have known. No one can justly be held liable to another for an injury resulting from a risk which the latter knowingly and willingly consented to incur. The second ground upon which assumption of risk is based is that every servant who enters or continues in the employment of a master without complaint thereby either expressly or impliedly agrees with him to assume the risks and dangers incident to the employment which a person of ordinary prudence in his situation would have known by the exercise of ordinary diligence and care, and to hold his master free from liability therefor. Thus, a master employs a servant to tear down or repair a building that is obviously in danger of falling upon the workman. The latter perceives the dangerous character of the place, and agrees upon the wages he will accept to perform it. The building falls upon and injures him. He cannot recover of his employer, because he willingly assumed the risk. St. Louis Cordage Co. v. Miller, (C. C. A.) 126 Fed. Rep. 495.

Distinction Between Assumption of Risks and Contributory Negligence. — Assumption of risks and contributory negligence are separate and distinct defenses. The risks which employees assume by entering and continuing in the service of a master with knowledge of the situation and its dangers, and without complaint, are not limited to those risks the danger from which is so imminent that persons of ordinary prudence would not incur them. The defense of assumption of risks is not conditioned or limited by the existence of contributory negligence, and the latter is not an element or attribute of it. Assumption of risk is alike available whether the risk assumed is great or small, whether the danger from it was imminent and certain or remote and improbable, and whether or not the servant was guilty of contributory negligence in assuming the risk or in exposing himself to the danger. St. Louis Cordage Co. v. Miller, (C. C. A.) 126 Fed. Rep. 495.

Defective Telephone Poles. — It has been held that there is no reason why a lineman, in view of the peculiar character of his work, may not lawfully contract to do any inspecting or testing reasonably necessary to determine whether he can safely climb a particular pole for the purpose of adjusting, transposing, or placing new wires. His acceptance of service with knowledge of the way in which the company conducts this part of its business, whether that way be the safest way for him or not, would imply an assumption of the risks incident to that mode of carrying on its work. It has been held that although a railroad company was negligent in sending out a work train without a conductor, and the negligence was the proximate cause of an accident to the fireman on the train, if the fireman, who was an experienced railroad man, knew that the train had no conductor, he assumed the increased risk incident thereto by voluntarily starting with and working on the train. App. 199.

If the master, having knowledge of the danger of which he knows the servant is ignorant, by his conduct and words gives the servant assurance of safety, so that he feels secure, and in consequence thereof he is injured, the master is answerable. Fletcher Bros. Co. v. Hyde, (Ind. App. 1905) 75 N. E. Rep. 9.

Although the servant is aware that there is some danger connected with the work which he is set to do, he may nevertheless be justified under the circumstances in relying upon the positive assurance of the master or his representative that there is no danger. Allen v. Gilman, 127 Fed. Rep. 609. See infra, cases supplementing page 148, note 2.

It has been said that it is the rule that where a servant has knowledge of a defect and calls the attention of the master to it and is assured by him that everything is right and told to go on with his work, the servant will not be held to have assumed the risk of so doing, unless the danger was so manifest that a person of ordinary prudence and caution would not have incurred it. D. Moore Co., 4 Ont. L. Rep. 167.

121. 1. Unwilling Performance under Fear of Losing Employment.—Dickenson v. Vernon, 77 Conn. 537; Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Herath, 207 Ill. 576, affirming 110 Ill. App. 596; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Johnson, 69 Kan. 721; Harff v. Green, 168 Mo. 308; Leitner v. Grieb, 104 Mo. App. 173; Meehan v. Great Northern R. Co., 13 N. Dak. 432; Bonn v. Galveston, etc., R. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1904) 82 S. W. Rep. 808; Lee v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 39 Wash. 388. See Kueckel v. O'Connor, 73 N. Y. App. Div. 594; Orr v. Southern Bell Telephone, etc., Co., 130 N. Car. 627; Gensen v. Ohio Oil Co., 12 Ohio Cir. Dec. 10, 22 Ohio Cir. Ct. 276. Compare Memphis, etc., Packet Co. v. Britton, 25 Ohio Cir. Ct. 153.

In Missouri it has been said that if a servant attempt a perilous task under protest, and for fear of losing his employment, full voluntary assent to incurring the danger is displaced to some extent by compulsion; and in that state, as well as according to many modern decisions in other jurisdictions, the question whether the risk was assumed is then for the jury. Adloff v. Columbia Pretzel, etc., Co., 100 Mo. App. 199.

2. Effect of Statutes Requiring Precautions for Servant's Safety.—Nottage v. Sawmill Phenix, 133 Fed. Rep. 979; McGinty v. Waterman, 93

121. c. LATENT DEFECTS AND DANGERS.—See note 4.

Ordinance Requiring Precautions for Servant's Safety.—Munn v. L. Wolff Mfg. Co., 94 Ill. App. 122.

Statute Requiring Employers to Guard or Fence Dangerous Machinery.—The Factory Act of Minnesota (Gen. Stat. 1894, § 2248), which requires employers to guard or fence dangerous machinery as far as possible, does not abolish the defense of assumption of risk. It does not deprive parties of their right to contract regarding the risks of their avocations. Glenmont Lumber Co. v. Roy, (C. C. A.) 126 Fed. Rep. 524.

Statute Requiring Gearing and Belting to Be Guarded.—The Factory Act of Missouri (2 Rev. Stat. 1899, § 6433), which requires gearing and belting to be guarded, does not abolish the defense of assumption of risk. St. Louis Cordage Co. v. Miller, (C. C. A.) 126 Fed. Rep. 495.

Ordinance Limiting Speed of Trains.—It has been held that where a brakeman in the employ of a railroad company knows that trains are run through a city at a rate of speed prohibited by ordinance, he assumes the risk of the danger incident to the violation of the ordinance. Martin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 118 Iowa 148, 96 Am. St. Rep. 371.

121. 3. Illinois.—Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Pating, 210 Ill. 342, affirming judgment 112 Ill. App. 4; Kellyville Coal Co. v. Strine, 217 Ill. 516; Himrod Coal Co. v. Adack, 94 Ill. App. 1.

It has been said that "the employee does not assume risks arising from the negligence of the master unless he is chargeable with knowledge of the fact of such negligence and of the defect or risk." Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Heerey, 203 Ill. 492.

The rule that the servant assumes the ordinary risks incident to the business presupposes that his master has performed the duties of caution, care, and vigilance which the law casts upon him. It is those risks alone which cannot be obviated by the adoption of reasonable measures of precaution by the master, that the servant assumes. Western Stone Co. v. Muscial, 196 Ill. 382, 89 Am. St. Rep. 325, affirming 96 Ill. App. 288.

Knowledge of Master's Negligence.—While a servant does not, as a general rule, assume the risks and dangers arising from the master's negligence, yet if the servant knows, or, by the exercise of ordinary care, should have known of the master's negligence subjecting the former to risks or dangers in the course of his employment, he assumes such risks and cannot recover for an injury caused thereby, unless there is some special circumstance shown, as that he acted in obedience to an order of the master, or that there was a promise on the part of the master to remedy the defect complained of, or perhaps in some other cases. Chicago City R. Co. v. Enroth, 113 Ill. App. 285. See supra, the cases supplementing page 112, note 1 et seq.

In Texas the rule is declared to be that a servant does not assume the risks arising from the failure of the master to do his duty, unless he knows the failure and the attendant risks, or in the ordinary discharge of his duty must necessarily have acquired that knowledge. Bonn v. Galveston, etc., R. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1904) 82 S. W. Rep. 808; Ray v. Pecos, etc., R. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 88 S. W. Rep. 466; Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, (Tex. Civ. Risks of Working with Incompetent Fellow Servant. — White v. Lewiston, etc., Frontier R. Co., 94 N. Y. App. Div. 4. See the title FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 12, page 920, note 3.

It is the duty of a servant to report to his master, or to those whom the master empowers to hire and discharge his workmen, the dangerous incompetence of his fellows known to him, and notice of such incompetency and a failure to report it entail upon him an assumption of its risk. Weeks v. Scharer, (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. Rep. 330.

127. 1. Limitation of Rule. — See infra, this title, the cases supplementing page 141, note 1.

In Missouri the rule is that if the master fails in his duty to his servant to furnish safe appliances, and if the servant knows, or by the exercise of ordinary care could know, that the appliances furnished are not altogether or reasonably safe, the servant is not obliged to refuse the appliances or quit the service of the master, if he reasonably believes that by the exercise of proper care and caution he can safely use the appliances, notwithstanding they are not so reasonably safe; and if he does use them and exercises such care and caution, and is injured, the servant does not waive his right to compensation for injuries received in consequence, nor is he guilty of contributory negligence. *Shepherd v. Discovery of Defect Immediately Before Accident.

See also Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Heerey, 203 Ill. 492, wherein it is suggested that in the case of promise to repair, the question is one of contributory negligence rather than an assumption of risks.

Defect Caused by Negligence of Servant. — This rule obtains as well where the defective condition is the result of the servant's own carelessness or negligence as where it results from other causes. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Sledge, 68 Kan. 321.

Remaining in Service After Promise to Replace Incompetent Servant. — If the servant complains to and notifies the master that a collaborator or fellow servant with whom he is associated in the performance of the duties of his employment is incompetent, and the master agrees and promises to replace him with a competent workman, the servant so complaining may, in reliance thereon, continue in the discharge of his duties associated with such incompetent workman, for a reasonable time, to enable the master to fulfil his agreement. During such time the servant so complaining is held not to assume the risks incident to and arising from such incompetency, unless they are so obvious and imminent that a person of ordinary prudence would not incur the same. Gray v. Red Lake Falls Lumber Co., 85 Minn. 24. See the title FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 12, p. 921, note 7.

Servant's Knowledge of the Danger. — It has been said that with respect to a danger which the servant knows as well as the master, the servant is not absolved from the charge of contributory negligence if he proceeds to ignore the danger, even though he does so upon the assurance of the master that at some future time the defect may be repaired. Rosa v. Volkening, 64 N. Y. App. Div. 426, affirmed without opinion 173 N. Y. 590.

Appliances of Simple Construction. — It has been held in effect that the rule which exempts a servant from assumption of risk where a promise to repair is made does not apply when the servant is engaged in ordinary labor with tools of simple construction. Gunning System v. Bapointe, 212 Ill. 274; Webster Mfg. Co. v. Nisbett, 205 Ill. 273; Crum v. North Vernon Pump, etc., Co., 34 Ind. App. 253; Baumwald v. Trenkman, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 88 N. Y. Supp. 182.

Master's Knowledge of the Danger. — It has been held that if a promise to repair is made, and an order to continue working is made, there is not a waiver of the assumption of risk by the servant, if the order to continue working was made without knowledge, or reasonable cause to believe, that the work had become extra hazardous. Equitable Powder Mfg. Co. v. Green, 109 Ill. App. 403.

Pacific Lounge, etc., Co.*, 29 Wash. 30; Yerkes v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 112 Wis. 184, 88 Am. St. Rep. 961.

The rule has no application to a case where neither master nor servant contemplated any additional danger to the servant in the use of the defective instrument, but only inconvenience in the work done by it. Chicago Bridge, etc., Co. v. Hayes, 91 Ill. App. 269.

Refusal of Master to Make Changes. — Where the plaintiff, about five days before he was hurt, told the defendant's superintendent that he needed a helper, and the superintendent told him that he could not give him any helper, it was held that this did not relieve the plaintiff of the assumed risk of continuing in the service after a refusal to furnish him a helper. Alton Roller Milling Co. v. Bender, 112 Ill. App. 484.

It has been said that a reasonable time, within the meaning of this rule, is any period which does not preclude all reasonable expectations that the promise may be kept. Anderson v. Fielding, 92 Minn. 42, 104 Am. St. Rep. 665.

2. Reasonable Time a Question for Jury. — Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Robertson, (C. C. A.) 139 Fed. Rep. 519; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. North, 97 Ill. App. 124; Illinois Steel Co. v. Mann, 100 Ill. App. 367, affirmed 197 Ill. 186; Kimmund v. Anderson, 103 Ill. App. 457; Anderson v. Fielding, 92 Minn. 42, 104 Am. St. Rep. 665; *Taylor v. Nevada-California-Oregon R. Rep. 788; Virginia, etc., Wheel Co. v. Harris, 103 Va. 708, See

Crooker v. Pacific Lounge, etc., Co., 29 Wash. 30. But see Albrecht v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 108 Wis. 530.

3. Express or Implied Promise Sufficient. — Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Robertson, (C. C. A.) 139 Fed. Rep. 519. See Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Garren, 96 Tex. 605, 97 Am. St. Rep. 939.

A promise by a representative of the master to remedy the defect complained of "as soon as he could" has been held to be a sufficient promise. Dowd v. Erie R. Co., 70 N. J. L. 451.

4. Promise to Servant Individually Unnecessary. — See Odin Coal Co. v. Tadlock, 216 Ill. 624.

5. Who May Make Promise — Vice-Principal. — Odin Coal Co. v. Tadlock, 216 Ill. 624; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Wicker, (Ind. App. 1904) 71 N. E. Rep. 223, judgment reversed on rehearing 34 Ind. App. 215; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Garren, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 72 S. W. Rep. 1028.

As a general rule, to be binding upon the master, the promise must have been made by a servant having authority to make it. Bunker Hill, etc., Min., etc., Co. v. Kettleson, (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. Rep. 529.

But it has been held that a servant will be excused for remaining in the employment a reasonable time in reliance upon a promise to make changes by the master's superintendent, although the superintendent actually did not have the authority to make the changes, if he assumed to have the authority, and the servant reasonably reposed in the assumption. Barney Dumping Boat Co. v. Clark, (C. C. A.) 112 Fed. Rep. 921, affirming 109 Fed. Rep. 235.

Foreman. — Notice of defects given to the foreman having charge of the particular work and department is notice to the master; and the promise to remedy the defect, made by such foreman, is in law the promise of the master. Boyd v. Blumenthal, 3 Penn. (Del.) 564; Ray v. Diamond State Steel Co., 2 Penn. (Del.) 525.

But it has been held that the rule relieving a servant from assumption of a risk where there has been a promise to repair does not apply where the promise to repair relied upon was made by a foreman of one of many gangs of men, all engaged in the prosecution of one enterprise for a common master, to a foreman of another one of such gangs; otherwise, by an interchange of such promises by the several foremen, all would be relieved from the assumption of risk without the knowledge of the master. Hempstock v. Lackawanna Iron, etc., Co., 93 N. Y. App. Div. 332.

6. Sufficiency of Complaint. — Anderson v. Seropian, 147 Cal. 201; Illinois Steel Co. v. Mann, 100 Ill. App. 367, affirmed 197 Ill. 186; Yerkes v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 112 Wis. 184, 88 Am. St. Rep. 961.

Dangers Known to Be Likely to Cause Injury at Any Moment. — If the workman expose himself to dangers that are so threatening or obvious as likely to cause injury at any moment, he is, notwithstanding any promise of his employer, guilty of contributory negligence if he remain at the work. In other words, he assumes the risk of the danger which he knows and appreciates, and, if the danger be so obvious or threatening as likely to cause injury at any moment, he has no right to continue at such work in the expectation that promised assistance will be sent. *Roccia v.  101.

Where the servant is employed "as a shoveler on the dump" of a quartz mill, receiving a shoveler's wages, and is put to work in a dangerous place in the mill, and is required to perform labor upon machinery for which he was not employed and with which he was not familiar, it cannot be said as a matter of law that he accepted all the ordinary risks incident to that work. Merrifield v. Maryland Gold

 Quartz Min. Co., 143 Cal. 54.

Obvious Defects and Dangers. — Although a servant may be unwilling to undertake work outside of the scope of his employment, if he does so with a knowledge of its dangerous character he assumes the risks. Dickenson v.
 Vernon, 77 Conn. 537.

As to dangers which it requires no special intelligence or training to foresee, it is not material whether the servant is engaged in the performance of his regular work or not. He assumes the risk of any danger which is plain, open, and apparent to his mind, although engaged in doing extra work or work outside of his usual employment. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v.
 Kinnare, 190 Ill. 9, affirming 91 Ill. App. 508.

Servant Engaging in Work Without Objection.
 — When an employee of mature years and ordinary intelligence is directed to do a temporary work outside of the line of his employment, and proceeds to do such work without any objection whatever, negligence of the employer can-

It has been said that "the assumption of risk by virtue of his employment is a matter which inheres in plaintiff's case, and the question is sufficiently raised by the defendant's denial of negligence; but assumption of the risk arising from defendant's negligence, if negligence be established, can only be raised by an affirmative plea, and defendant assumes the burden of its proof." It is not necessary that the defendant set up by answer that the risk on account of which the injury complained of occurred was an assumed one in order that he receive the benefit of that fact. American Car, etc., Co. v. Clark, 32 Ind. App. 644.

That the plaintiff assumed the risk which resulted in his injury may, of course, be established by the testimony of the plaintiff. Iowa Gold Min. Co. v. Diefenthaler, 32 Colo. 391.

If assumption of the risk appears from the evidence of the plaintiff, the defendant is entitled to the benefit of the defense. White v. Lewiston, etc., Frontier R. Co., 94 N. Y. App. Div. 4; at least if it has been pleaded, Ehrenfried v. Lackawanna Iron, etc., Co., 89 N. Y. App. Div. 130, affirmed without opinion 180 N. Y. 515.

The fact that the plaintiff assumed the risk of the accident causing the injury complained of may so clearly appear from the evidence produced by the plaintiff himself that the defendant may avail himself thereof by a motion for a nonsuit or for an instruction directing a verdict in his favor. Greeley v. Foster, 32 Colo. 292.

In Indiana it has been said that in an action by a servant against the master to recover for injuries alleged to have been received on account of defects in the machinery, appliances, etc., the complaint must disclose an absence of knowledge on the part of the plaintiff of the defects or dangers of which he complains. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Hunsucker, 33 Ind. App. 27.

And it has been held that section 359a of Burns's Rev. Stat. Ind., 1901, does not abolish or modify the well-settled rule that in an ordinary action against an employer to recover for the injury or death of an employee through negligence of the employer, the plaintiff shall negative knowledge on the part of the employee of the danger through fault in the employment or retention of servants or want of safety of implements or appliances. Bowles v. Indiana R. Co., 27 Ind. App. 672, 87 Am. St. Rep. 279.

Evidence of Assumption of Risks. — In an action by a brakeman to recover for injuries received by being thrown from the ladder on the side of a freight car, by coming in contact with a scale box structure alongside the track, it was held that the written application of the plaintiff for employment, which was offered by the defendant for the purpose of showing that the plaintiff had notice of the location of the track scale box and that he was in danger of being knocked off a car when passing the structure, was properly excluded. *Texas, etc., R. It has been held that it was not error to refuse to instruct the jury that a servant must be "observing" and that his "failure to observe what he should have observed" would defeat a recovery, and to modify the instruction so that, in substance, it required the servant to use due care, diligence, etc. The word "observe," it was said, is defined by Webster to mean "to notice with care, to be on the watch respecting," and a servant is not required to "notice with care" and "to be on the watch" for defects and imperfections. Rock Island Sash, etc., Works v. Pohlman, 210 Ill. 133, affirming 99 Ill. App. 670.

In an action to recover damages for the death of plaintiff's intestate, on the ground that the defendant failed to take any measures to protect the deceased from the consequences of his voluntary intoxication while upon one of its freight trains as a brakeman, it was held that the trial court rightly directed a verdict for the defendant, because the evidence failed to show that its train employees had any notice or knowledge of the condition of the deceased. *Parker v. In an action to recover under the Alabama Employer's Liability Act (Ala. Code. § 1749) for the consequences of a wanton, wilful, or intentional wrong, contributory negligence is not a defense. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. York, 128 Ala. 305.

Wilful Violation of Statute Requiring Safeguards in Mines. — In an action against mine owners by a servant to recover for personal injuries sustained by him in consequence of the wilful disregard of statutory provisions requiring the adoption of specified safeguards for the protection of servants, the contributory negligence of the plaintiff is not a defense. Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Rowatt, 196 Ill. 156, affirming 96 Ill. App. 248; Western Anthracite Coal, etc., Co. v. Beaver, 192 Ill. 333, affirming 95 Ill. App. 95.

Servant's Knowledge of Negligent Habit or Reckless Act. — It has been said that the rule of nonliability for contributory negligence, in case of injuries wantonly, wilfully, or recklessly inflicted, does not apply where the injured person had or should have had knowledge of the grossly negligent habit or the impending reckless act of the injurer, and could have avoided their consequences by prudence and caution upon his own part. Only when an act of contributory negligence is performed without knowledge or apprehension that the reckless and wanton conduct of another will or may conjoin to produce an evil effect will the injured person be relieved from liability for the result of his own negligence. Beal v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 62 Kan. 250.

138. 1. Gross Negligence. — The law does not permit a recovery by a plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence, on the ground that the negligence of the defendant was gross. Nothing short of a wilful act or wilful or intentional neglect of duty will authorize a recovery by a plaintiff guilty of negligence contributing to the injury complained of. Chicago, etc., Coal Co. *v. But in Osborne v. Alabama Steel, etc., Co., 135 Ala. 571, it was said: "An employee may be negligent in failing to give notice of defects in his employer's ways, works, plant, or machinery, when to do so is necessary for his own protection, and he may be negligent also in the manner of prosecuting his work by failing to use due care to avoid danger created by the defects; but his mere continuance in the service for which he was employed, though with knowledge of such defects and danger, cannot, as between him and the employer, be accounted an act of negligence. The employer cannot treat as a breach of duty, but is held to sanction, that which by contract of employment he has required the employee to do."

It has been held that a servant is not guilty of contributory negligence in continuing in the employment unless the danger is great enough to deter a man of ordinary prudence. Dean v. St. Louis Woodenware Works, 106 Mo. App. 167.

140. 1. Defects Discoverable by Exercise of Ordinary Prudence. — Flockhart v. Hocking Coal Co., 126 Iowa 576; Wellston Coal Co. v. Smith, 65 Ohio St. 70, 87 Am. St. Rep. 547.

If the defect or danger is open and obvious, though it exists through the employer's negligence, an employee of mature years will be presumed to have knowledge of it, and though the employer may have been negligent in the matter, the employee is also guilty of negligence in accepting or continuing in the service, and this becomes equivalent to contributory negligence which prevents a recovery. Bodell v. Brazil Block Coal Co., 25 Ind. App. 654.

A servant is not chargeable with contributory negligence simply because of working around uncovered cogwheels, unless the danger was so great that a prudent person of his years and capacity would have declined to face it. Bair v. Hibel, 103 Mo. App. 621.

Failure of Servant to Use Automatic Coupler. — The Act of March 2, 1893, 27 U. S. Stat. at L. c. 196, p. 351, which makes it the duty of common carriers to equip their cars engaged in interstate traffic with couplers which can be uncoupled "without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars," imposes upon the employees the correlative duty of using these couplers when furnished, and of refraining from unnecessarily going between the ends of cars to uncouple them. A failure of a servant to discharge this duty, which directly contributes to his injury, is fatal to an action for damages on account of it. Gilbert v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A.) 128 Fed. Rep. 529, affirming 123 Fed. Rep. 832.

It seems that where cars are equipped with automatic couplers, which are in working order and can reasonably be used, it is negligence on the part of an employee to ignore the safety appliance provided, and resort to the method formerly in use, obviously more dangerous, of stepping between moving cars, within the rail, for the purpose of making a coupling or uncoupling. *Pierson v. It has been held that a servant who sees a defect in the appliance furnished him by his master in his employment, which he can easily and without skill remedy as well as his master, and which he fails to remedy, is guilty of contributory negligence and not entitled to recover. Glasscock v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 106 Mo. App. 657.

Duty of Conductor to Inspect Train. — It has been held that by a rule of a railroad company requiring conductors and brakemen to be at the starting points of their trains at least forty minutes before leaving time, to see that their trains are ready for departure on time and that their cars are in proper running order before starting, and to examine them at water stations, stopping places, and wherever opportunity offers, to see if the running gear, brakes, etc., are in proper order, it was not intended that the conductor should critically examine the several cars in his train, and the attachments thereto, with that degree of particularity which measures the duty of the company itself. employees (the car inspectors) are charged with that special duty, and, besides, the time prescribed for his preparations for leaving would frequently, if not ordinarily, be insufficient for him to make such thorough examination in addition to the other duties imposed upon him for execution within the time mentioned. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Burris, (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. Rep. 882, holding that a conductor was not negligent in failing to discover the defective and insecure condition of a brake beam upon one of the cars in his train.

Failure of Lineman to Inspect Telegraph Pole.

— In an action to recover for personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff, while working for the defendant telegraph company, by the falling of a defective pole upon which he was working, it was held that if the plaintiff had not sufficient experience to enable him to do the work, and if he was neither warned nor instructed as to the proper mode of performing it, he could not be said as a matter of law to be guilty of contributory negligence in not making an inspection of the pole before proceeding to work upon it. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Burgess, (C. C. A.) 108 Fed. Rep. 26.

Reliance by Servant on Master's Performance of Duty. — Ordinarily the servant may rely on the performance by the master of his duty to inspect and repair. See supra, the cases supplementing page 90, note 7.

Failure to Notify Master of Defects in Work Place. — In an action to recover for injuries received by a gas explosion in the defendant's mine, the court was asked to instruct the jury as follows: "If you find that the amount of air required was circulated in the mine, and the plaintiff knew of the existence of gas in his place of working, but did not inform the persons whose duty it was to make such examination, then the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, and you will find for the defendant." It was held that the instruction was properly refused because it was erroneous; according to this request for an instruction, it was the duty of the plaintiff, if he knew of the existence of gas in his place of working, to inform the defendant, notwithstanding it knew or ought to have known that fact. Mt. Nebo Anthracite Coal Co. v. Williamson, 73 Ark. 530.

One who voluntarily and unnecessarily exposes himself to an imminent known danger, and thereby directly contributes to his injury, cannot escape the fatal effect of his contributory negligence because the unknown negligence of the defendant, which concurred to produce the injury, made the danger greater than he supposed it to be. *Gilbert v. Co., (C. C. A.) 128 Fed. Rep. 529, affirming 123 Fed. Rep. 832.

The act of an engineer in going under his engine, while the train was standing on a sidetrack, to find and repair a leak in the air-brake apparatus, without first setting the brakes which would have held the train, or notifying any of the train crew that he was under the engine, although he knew that another train would soon be run upon the sidetrack, has been held to be contributory negligence as a matter of law. Whitcomb v. McNulty, (C. C. A.) 105 Fed. Rep. 863.

Brakeman Riding on Locomotive.—The widow of a brakeman in the employ of a railroad company who was killed by the derailment of a locomotive upon which he was riding and whose presence thereon was in violation of a duty devolving upon him to be elsewhere, cannot recover for his death, even if the derailment was due to the negligence of the company. Under such circumstances it could not properly be held that the employee was free from fault directly contributing to his death. Chattanooga Southern R. Co. v. Myers, 112 Ga. 237.

Using Defective Lever to Uncouple Cars.—A railway train was equipped with two levers—one at each side of it—to enable the brakeman to draw a pin between two cars without entering between them. The machinery attached to the lever on the side of the plaintiff was out of order, while that attached to the lever on the opposite side was in good condition. It was held that the fact that the brakeman chose to and did step in between the cars while in motion to draw the pin, instead of using the lever on the opposite side of the train, provided for the purpose, was evidence of negligence contributing to an injury resulting from his stumbling while walking between the cars. *Morris v. Going Between Cars to Make Coupling on the Inside Instead of the Outside of a Curve.—It cannot be said that a brakeman is guilty of contributory negligence in going between cars on the inside instead of the outside of a curve to make a coupling, unless he can perform his duties as well and efficiently in the one way as the other. *Mobile, etc., R. Alabama Employer's Liability Act. — There cannot be a recovery under subdivision 1 of the Alabama Employer's Liability Act if the injured employee is himself the agent through whom the employer undertakes to see that the ways, works, etc., are in proper condition, and if the employee undertakes that responsibility, he cannot complain. Pioneer Min., etc., Co. v. Thomas, 133 Ala. 279.

Federal Statute Requiring Automatic Couplers. — The Act of Congress of March 2, 1893 (27 U. S. Stat. at L. 532, c. 196, § 8, 6 Fed. Stat. Annot. 752), requiring cars to be equipped with automatic couplers, does not exclude the defense of contributory negligence. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Arrighi, (C. C. A.) 129 Fed. Rep. 347.

taken for the safety of miners. Riverton Coal Co. v. Shepherd, 207 Ill. 395; Fulton v. Wilmington Star Min. Co., (C. C. A.) 133 Fed. Rep. 193, following Carterville Coal Co. v. Abbott, 181 Ill. 495.

Under the Illinois statute (4 Starr & C. Annot. Stat. 1902, c. 93) relating to mines and miners, requiring a safe and commodious passageway around the landing place at the bottom of every shaft, and providing a penalty for any wilful neglect, refusal, or failure to do the things required to be done by the act, it has been held that the defense of contributory negligence on the part of the person injured does not lie to an action for the wilful failure of the mine operator to comply with the requirements of the statute. Chicago-Coulterville Coal Co. v. Fidelity, etc., Co., 130 Fed. Rep. 957.

In an action brought under the Illinois statute (Hurd's Ill. Rev. Stat. 1903, c. 48, § 33), which prohibited the employment of children under fourteen years of age in manufacturing establishments, it was held that the contributory negligence of the plaintiff, who was a mere infant, while he was in the performance of the work he had been directed to do, was not a defense. It was said, however, that if the plaintiff left the task which he had been directed to perform, and while not engaged in doing work which he had been directed to do by his master was injured through an accident to which his own negligence contributed, while he was still in or upon the premises of the master, a different question would present itself. American Car, etc., Co. v. Armentraut, 214 Ill. 509.

152. 1. Nature of Employment — Inexperience of Plaintiff. — Neilson v. Nebo Brown Stone Co., 25 Utah 37.

Evidence of Due Care. — It is not necessary that evidence of the exercise of due care by the plaintiff should be direct; the fact may be inferred from the circumstances. Murray v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 72 N. H. 32, 101 Am. St. Rep. 660.

Danger Not Obvious. — It has been held that a plaintiff who is charged with contributory negligence may testify that he could not see that it was dangerous to do work in the manner in which he was doing it. Southern Car, etc., Co. v. Bartlett, 137 Ala. 234.

Assurance of Safety. — Evidence of the contents of a telegram from a conductor of the defendant to the plaintiff, signed by a train dispatcher, directing cars to be started at a certain place, and stating that the track was "O. K.," has been held to have been admissible as tending to prove that the plaintiff when injured was acting in the scope of his employment, and was assured of the track's good condition. Southern R. Co. v. Howell, 135 Ala. 639.

2. Actions of Other Employees. — Chattanooga Southern R. Co. v. Myers, 112 Ga. 237; Montgomery v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 109 Mo. App. 88. Compare *Western R. Co. v. But in an action in which it was contended that the plaintiff's intestate, a brakeman who was killed while attempting to make a coupling, had been guilty of contributory negligence in going between the cars on the inside instead of the outside of a curve for the reason that there was not space enough on the inside of the curve between the cars, when the cars came together, to do the coupling, it was held that testimony that another person had successfully made a coupling on the inside of the curve was admissible. Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Bromberg, 114 Ala. 258.

It has been held that proof of the usual and customary method of performing a service may be received as bearing on the question of the employee's exercise of reasonable care in following the method indicated by custom and usage. Pierson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 127 Iowa 13. See San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Waller, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 44.

In an action to recover damages for injuries received by the plaintiff by falling into a trench which had been dug across a pathway on the premises of the defendant, which was customarily used by the plaintiff and other employees in going to and from their work, it was held that the plaintiff was properly allowed to testify as to what was done by other persons who were in her company when they encountered the trench. Norris v. Cudahy Packing Co., 124 Iowa 748.

Reliance by the Servant upon a Custom to Give Warning of the approach of the trains may be shown, it has been held in an action to recover for the death of a servant by being run down by a train while he was crossing a track. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Mahoney, 12 Ohio Cir. Dec. 366, 22 Ohio Cir. Ct. 469.

Presumption Arising from Instinct of Self-Preservation. — It has been held that in a case in which there is no direct evidence of what the injured servant was doing at the time of the accident, or how he came to receive his injuries, it is proper to instruct the jury to consider "the instincts which naturally lead men to avoid injury and preserve their own lives, and the presumption that they will ordinarily do so." *Morbey v. It has been stated as a general rule that in an action to recover damages for the death of a plaintiff's intestate, alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence, when there is neither direct nor circumstantial evidence which points either to the presence or absence of contributory negligence, the plaintiff cannot recover without some affirmative evidence to show that the decedent was not guilty of contributory negligence. Scialo v. Steffens, 105 N. Y. App. Div. 592.

In Indiana the rule as to the burden of proving contributory negligence has been changed by statute. See infra, this title, the cases supplementing page 153, note 3.

By Statute in Indiana (Burns's Ann. Stat. 1901, § 359a) the burden is cast on the defendant to establish that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence by a fair preponderance of all of the evidence in the case applicable to that issue. Davis v. Mercer Lumber Co., 164 Ind. 413; Diamond Block Coal Co. v. Cuthbertson, (Ind. App. 1903) 67 N. E. Rep. 558; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Collins, 163 Ind. 569; *Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Rep. 223, judgment reversed on rehearing 34 Ind. App. 215.

In North Carolina contributory negligence is expressly made an affirmative defense by statute and the burden is upon the defendant to establish it. Pharr v. Atlanta, etc., Air Line R. Co., 132 N. Car. 418.

154. 1. Contributory negligence may be established by the evidence adduced on behalf of the plaintiff. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Collins, 163 Ind. 569.

The defendant may avail himself of all the facts and circumstances which appear as a part of the plaintiff's case. M. S. Huey Co. v. Johnston, 164 Ind. 489.

Contributory fault, like any other fact that must be affirmatively shown, is to be considered established when it is found to be sustained by a preponderance of all the evidence in the case, without reference to whether it was produced by one party or the other. Hence it is error to instruct the jury to the effect that it must not charge the plaintiff with fault unless the defendants have proven the fact by a preponderance, thus depriving the defendants of the benefit of any evidence that may have been disclosed by the plaintiff and his witnesses. Indianapolis v. Cauley, 164 Ind. 304.

If the evidence in plaintiff's behalf establishes beyond question that his own omission to use ordinary care contributed immediately to, or itself caused, the injury, the court should, on motion, direct a verdict or grant a nonsuit. Cummings v. Helena, etc., Smelting, etc., Co., 26 Mont. 434.

Instructions as to Burden of Proof. — In cases in which the plaintiff's evidence raises the issue of contributory negligence it has been held that an instruction that the burden of establishing contributory negligence is on the defendant is misleading, unless the jury are also instructed that in determining such issue they may look to all the evidence in the case, whether introduced by plaintiff or defendant. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Melville, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 87 S. W. Rep. 863.

Ct. 469; Tucker v. Northern Pac. Terminal Co., 41 Oregon 82; Texas Portland Cement, etc., Co. v. Lee, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 482; Bier v. Hosford, 35 Wash. 544. See Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hill, 95 Tex. 629; Sandquist v. Independent Telephone Co., 38 Wash. 313.

Existence of contributory negligence may be adduced from the whole evidence, including that of plaintiff. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Lightheiser, 163 Ind. 247, rehearing denied 163 Ind. 264.

Where the evidence of the plaintiff contains evidence in support of the defense of contributory negligence, the court should either not charge that the burden of proof to establish contributory negligence is on the defendant or should give a charge so modified as to permit the jury to look to the whole evidence in determining whether the defense has been established. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Hill, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 12.

The duty of the master to an employee or a servant arises out of the contract between them. Western Wrecking, etc., Co. v. O'Donnell, 101 Ill. App. 492.

In an action against a slaughtering and packing company by a servant to recover for personal injuries received, while salting beef which was being packed in refrigerator cars, by the collision of an engine and cars with the car in which the beef was being packed, it was held that there clearly could be no recovery against the defendant except on the theory that the engine crew causing the accident was under the defendant's control to such an extent as to establish the relation of master and servant. Swift v. Ronan, 202 Ill. 202, reversing 103 Ill. App. 475.

It is not a defense to an action to recover for personal injuries sustained by a servant while in the service of the master that the servant was not at the particular time of the accident actually at work, but was standing by doing nothing. Reed v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 94 Mo. App. 371.

It has been held that the relation of master and servant is not interrupted by the act of the servant in quitting his actual work for a few minutes for the purpose of obtaining a drink of water. Jarvis v. Hitch, (Ind. App. 1902) 65 N. E. Rep. 608.

Status of Employee During Dinner Hour.—The relation of master and servant is not necessarily suspended during the servant's dinner hour. Heldmaier v. Cobbs, 195 Ill. 172, affirming 96 Ill. App. 315.

In an action in which it was claimed that the injured employee could not recover for the reason that at the time of the accident the noon hour had come and he was going down from one of the upper floors in which he worked, to eat his dinner, it was said that "going from the particular part of a building where he has been set to work, to eat dinner, is an incident of a workman's employment who is engaged by the day in erecting the building in question, at least so long as he has not finished passing over or through the building to get his dinner." Boyle v. Columbian Fire Proofing Co., 182 Mass. 93.

Status of Servant Riding Home on Master's Hand Car.—It has been held that where an employer returns his laborers to their homes by means of a hand car, a number of miles from the place of work, after working hours, the employer is liable in damages for an accident which happened while so returning home, due to the negligence of the foreman in charge of the men, though the accident happened after the day's work had been completed. Wilson v. Banner Lumber Co., 108 La. 590.

Person Riding on Train to Learn Duties of Flagman.—It has been held that a person riding on a train by permission of the railroad company to learn the duties of a flagman with a view to entering the employ of the company, and performing such elementary and simple service as he was capable of under the direction of the conductors of trains, sustained the relation of a servant to the company. Huntzicker v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 129 Fed. Rep. 548.

Express Messengers.—It has been held that an express messenger, while upon a train in the performance of his duties, sustains to the railroad company a relation which is analogous to one of its own employees, and the measure of care which the railway company owes to him in respect of its track, engine, cars, and the operation of its train is the same as that which it owes to those in its immediate service. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. O'Brien (C. C. A.) 132 Fed. Rep. 593. See the titles CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, vol. 5, p. 512, note 2; FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 12, p. 995, note 1.

Liability of Defendant to Servants of Independent Contractor.—There is no liability on the part of a master to servants of independent contractors except for his own negligence. Nyback v. Champagne Lumber Co. (C. C. A.) 109 Fed. Rep. 732. See the title INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS, vol. 16, p. 195, notes 1 and 2.

Liability of Agent of Undisclosed Principal.—Although the employer may be acting as the agent of another, if the fact of agency is not disclosed he becomes liable to the employees for negligence in the same manner and to the same extent as if he were a principal in interest. Morris v. Malone, 200 Ill. 132, 93 Am. St. Rep. 180.

Liability of Lessor of Railroad to Servants of Lessee.—It has been held that where a railroad has been leased by one company to another, the lessor is not liable for injuries to servants of the lessee in consequence of the negligence of the lessee. Swice v. Maysville, etc., R. Co., 116 Ky. 253.

Liability of Lessor of Factory to Servants of Lessee.—When a factory was being operated by a lessee under a lease which gave him complete control of the business, it was held that the lessor was not responsible for the negligence of the lessee resulting in injury to an employee in the factory. *Ault Woodenware Co. v. Rules Exempting the Master from Liability for Negligence.—Consolidated Coal Co. v. Gruber, 188 Ill. 584, affirming 91 Ill. App. 15.

In Canada it has been held that a railway company may stipulate with its employee that in consideration of a contribution by the former to the funds of an insurance and provident society established for the aid of workmen and their families in case of injury or death by accident, it will not be liable for the consequences of an accident to the employee caused by the fault of his fellow workmen. Ferguson v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 20 Quebec Super. Ct. 54.

Under the Iowa statutes a railroad company is not relieved of liability for the death of an express messenger, by a contract between the express company and the messenger in which the latter assumes all the risks of the employment. O'Brien v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 116 Fed. Rep. 502.

Contracts Limiting the Master's Liability Held Valid.—It has been held that a contract of employment between a sleeping car company and a porter whereby the porter assumes all risks of accidents and casualties by railway travel or otherwise, incident to the employment and service, which is executed without fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the company, constitutes a valid defense to an action against the company by the porter to recover for personal injuries sustained by him. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., v. Difendaffer, (C. C. A.) 125 Fed. Rep. 893; McDermon v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 122 Fed. Rep. 669.

Such a contract, it has been held, is not rendered invalid by the Missouri statute (Mo. Rev. Stat. 1899, § 2276) providing as follows: "No contract made between any railroad corporation and any of its agents or servants, based upon the contingency of the injury or death of any agent or servant, limiting the liability of such railroad corporation for any damages under the provisions of this act, shall be valid or binding but all such contracts or agreements shall be null and void." McDermon v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 122 Fed. Rep. 669.

It has been held that a Texas statute providing that no contract made between the employer and the employee, based upon the contingency of death or injury of the employee, and limiting the liability of the employer or fixing damages to be recovered, shall be valid or binding, was applicable in an action brought against a sleeping car company by the plaintiff, who was a citizen of the state of Texas, wherein he resided, to recover for personal injuries received by him while in the defendant's employ in the republic of Mexico. Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Jackson, (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. Rep. 549.

Failure of Servant to Read Contract.—It has been held that where a contract of employment between a sleeping car company and a porter releases the company from liability to the porter for personal injuries by accidents or casualties by railway travel or otherwise, incident to the employment and service, the mere failure of the porter to read the contract which he signed does not amount to fraud on the part of the company, if he had an opportunity given to him to read the contract, and his failure to read it was his own negligence. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Difendaffer, (C. C. A.) 125 Fed. Rep. 893.

(2) When Release Obtained by Fraud or Misrepresentation. — See note 5.

a railroad company it has been held that a stipulation manifestly designed for the benefit of the company, to the effect that a beneficiary would not be paid under the relief and hospital system unless the employee first filed with the proper officers of this department satisfactory releases, does not authorize one who has received benefits at the hands of this department, in accordance with his terms of membership therein, to prosecute his claim for damages merely because he has failed or refused to execute such a release. Carter v. Brunswick, etc., R. Co., 115 Ga. 853.

It has been held that an employee of a railroad company who has accepted from it damages for injuries cannot recover benefits for such injuries from the relief department of such corporation, under an agreement of membership releasing the company from liability in case of such acceptance. Clinton v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 60 Neb. 692.

Suit against the master and a judgment against the plaintiff on demurrer has been held not to bar a claim against the relief fund. O'Reilly v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 69 N. J. L. 119, affirmed without opinion (N. J. 1904) 59 Atl. Rep. 1118.

In Nebraska it has been held that the election of the widow of a member of the voluntary relief department of the Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. to accept the provisions of a relief certificate in which she is the beneficiary, does not bar an action by the personal representative of the deceased against the railroad company, under the provisions of section 2, chapter 21, Comp. Stat. Neb., for the benefit of the minor children of the deceased. Oyster v. Burlington Relief Dept., 65 Neb. 789.

156. 6. Contracts of Release After Injury. — Fleming v. Southern R. Co., 131 N. Car. 476; Bowers v. Detroit Southern R. Co., 26 Ohio Cir. Ct. 518; Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Burns, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 63 S. W. Rep. 1035; Webb v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 27 Tex. Civ. App. 75. See Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Gipe, 160 Ind. 360.

Release Executed by Widow Not Binding on Administratrix of Deceased Person. — Cowen v. Ray, 108 Fed. Rep. 320, 47 C. C. A. 352.

Receipt in Full of All Demands. — It has been held that it could not be decided as a matter of law that a receipt in full of all demands executed by a plaintiff who had sustained injuries while in the employ of the defendant was a release of the plaintiff's claim for damages for the personal injuries, where the plaintiff testified that the receipt was for his wages and the amount which was paid at the time of making the receipt exactly covered his wages and the ten dollars which defendant proposed to pay on a doctor's bill. Davis v. Diamond Carriage, etc., Co., 146 Cal. 59.

7. What Consideration Sufficient. — Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Minter, (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 85 S. W. Rep. 477; Rhoades v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 49 W. Va. 494, 87 Am. St. Rep. 826.

Consideration Held Insufficient. — Russell v. Dayton Coal, etc., Co., 109 Tenn. 43.

Agreement to Employ. — Bowers v. Detroit Southern R. Co., 26 Ohio Cir. Ct. 518.

Parol Evidence to Contradict Consideration. — If a contractual consideration is stated in the release, parol evidence is not admissible to vary or contradict the consideration expressed. Indianapolis Union R. Co. v. Houlihan, 157 Ind. 494.

Insufficiency of Consideration as Evidence of Fraud. — Inadequacy of the consideration is proper evidence to be considered upon an issue of fraud, and may, in connection with other evidence and circumstances tending to show fraud, be sufficient to establish the fraud and to set aside the release. Dorsett v. Clement-Ross Mfg. Co., 131 N. Car. 254.

Misrepresentation of Contents of Instrument. — Great Northern R. Co. v. Kasischke, (C. C. A.) 104 Fed. Rep. 440.

Mental Incapacity of Servant to Understand Transaction. — A release is not binding when the servant, at the time of signing it, was not in a condition to comprehend what he was doing because of the effect of the accident and of drugs. Colorado City v. Liae, 28 Colo. App. 468.

Failure to Read Release. — If the execution of a release is procured by fraud, it is not binding on the servant even though he may have neglected to read the instrument or to have it read to him. Western R. Co. v. Arnett, 137 Ala. 414.

Release Incorrectly Read to Person Who Cannot Read.—Where a party cannot read and it is read to him incorrectly, he may have it set aside for fraud. Dorsett v. Clement-Ross Mfg. Co., 131 N. Car. 254.

Burden of Proof.—When the plaintiff alleges that a release was made without a good and valuable consideration, and that it was in effect procured by fraud, the burden of proof is upon him to show the truth of the allegations. St. Louis, etc., Electric R. Co. v. Erlinger, 112 Ill. App. 506.

On an issue as to whether a party had been induced to sign a contract by fraudulent misrepresentations, the mere failure to specifically instruct the jury that the burden was on him who attacked the contract to show that it was so procured was no cause for a new trial, when the court charged generally that the burden of proof lies upon the party asserting or affirming a fact, and to the existence of whose case or defense the proof of such fact is essential. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Goodwin, 120 Ga. 83.

Where the obvious defect is such that there is no room for diverse inference with regard to the knowledge and appreciation of the danger thereof by the injured employee, assumption of the risk becomes a question for the court, exactly as any other question of fact with regard to which the evidence is uncontroverted. Where there is room for diverse inference, the question is one for the jury. Avery v. Nordyke, etc., Co., 34 Ind. App. 541.

Servant Combining Personal Business with Business of Master. — The fact that the servant is combining his own business with that of the master does not necessarily relieve the master from liability. Carl Corper Brewing, etc., Co. v. Huggins, 96 Ill. App. 144.

166. 1. Negligence in Using Master's Horses. — Brudi v. Luhrman, 26 Ind. App. 221; Doherty v. Rice, 182 Mass. 182; Driscoll v. Towle, 181 Mass. 416; Steinacker v. Hills Bros. Co., 91 N. Y. App. Div. 521; O'Leary v. Muldoon, 56 N. Y. App. Div. 626; Prinz v. Lucas, 210 Pa. St. 620.

Leaving Horse Unsecured. — A master has been held liable for the negligence of his servant in leaving the master's horse unsecured in a street contrary to the provisions of an ordinance. Healy v. Johnson, 127 Iowa 221.

Ownership of Conveyance by Servant. — It has been said that where the conveyance is used about the master's business, and with his knowledge of such use, the fact that it is owned by the servant does not alone relieve the master of liability. Carl Corper Brewing, etc., Co. v. Huggins, 96 Ill. App. 144.

4. Deviation from Route. — Krzikowsky v. Sperring, 107 Ill. App. 493; Lovejoy v. Campbell, 16 S. Dak. 231.

If the negligent act be done by the servant while engaged directly or indirectly in the master's business, liability of the master is not to be avoided on the ground alone that the servant has, for purposes of his own, chosen a method less direct than he might have selected for the work. Carl Corper Brewing, etc., Co. v. Huggins, 96 Ill. App. 144.

Texas. — St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Mayfield, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 82.

A boy about six years of age, a guest of the defendants at their hotel, wandered out of the room assigned to him, and into a room in which a bell boy or porter of the defendants was engaged in playing a harmonica for his own amusement, and the latter accidentally or wilfully shot the former with a pistol. It was held that the bell boy was not acting within the course or within the apparent or actual scope of his employment at the time of the shooting, and the innkeepers were not liable for the injury he inflicted. Clancy v. Barker, (C. C. A.) 131 Fed. Rep. 161.

Liability of Husband for Wife's Negligence. — It has been held that where a wife is engaged in the use of her husband's personal property in the performance of her duty as a wife, in domestic service for herself and her family, including her husband, not in his presence, he is not liable for a personal injury inflicted by her, not by his direction, but by her trespass, through her negligent use of such property. Radke v. Schlundt, 30 Ind. App. 213.

Acts of Servant Intrusted with Dangerous Instrument. — A master who intrusts the custody and control of a dangerous appliance or agency to the management of a servant will not be permitted to avoid responsibility for injuries inflicted thereby on the plea that the servant in the particular act complained of was acting outside the scope of his employment. Barmore v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 85 Miss. 426.

Liability of Master Dependent on Negligence. — Under section 746 of the Revised Code of Civil Procedure of South Dakota, giving to the widow of the deceased a right of action for damages against a railroad company for the killing of her husband, by reason of the neglect, carelessness, or unskilfulness of the corporation, its agents, servants, and employees, it seems that a railroad company is not liable for a wanton and reckless act of a servant unless it can be made to depend upon the negligence of the company, either in selecting such an agent, or in retaining him after having notice of his vicious character. Bowen v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (C. C. A.) 136 Fed. Rep. 306.

In Louisiana. — Under the Louisiana Civil Code, art. 2320, the responsibility of masters is confined to damages occasioned by their servants in the "exercise of the functions in which they are employed," and they are not liable for collateral torts committed by servants while attending to the duties of their employment. *Vara v. Steam Engine Works v. Lawrence Cement Co., 167 N. Y. 440, reversing 45 N. Y. App. Div. 629.

Where a mover of safes, upon undertaking to move a safe for the owners of a building from one floor to another, stipulated that the owners of the building should take the risk of the elevator by which the safe was to be moved, it was held that the janitor of the building, who operated the elevator, was the servant of the owners with respect to the work of moving the safe, and they were liable to an employee of the safe-mover for injuries sustained by him through the negligence of the janitor. Thayer v. Checkley, (C. C. A.) 127 Fed. Rep. 556.

4. Burden of Showing Negligence. — Obertoni v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 186 Mass. 481.

Negligence of Master in Selection of Servant. — The presumption of law exists that the master has exercised due care and circumspection in the selection of a competent servant, and the burden rests upon him who asserts the negligence to prove affirmatively not only the fact of incompetency, but the want of due care by the master in making the selection. Bowen v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (C. C. A.) 136 Fed. Rep. 306.

Burden of Showing Relation of Master and Servant. — The plaintiff must show that the relation of master and servant existed between the defendant and the person whose negligence caused the injury. De Grazia v. Rudden, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 88 N. Y. Supp. 397.

In an action against a railroad company for the wrongful acts of its employees, it must be shown that the person committing the injury was the employee of the company; and the difficulty of making the proof cannot obviate the necessity of doing so, although it may permit of slighter evidence than otherwise might be required. Axtell v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 9 Idaho 392.

Burden of Proving Scope of Servant's Authority. — It has been held that in order to recover against the master for the act of his servant, the plaintiff must show that the servant acted within the general scope of his authority. Kessler v. Deutsch, (Supm. Ct. App. T.) 44 Misc. (N. Y.) 209.

It has been held that the true test in determining whether the doctrine of respondet superior applies in any case is, does the person holding the position of master have, for the time being, or is it his duty to assume, control over the servant in respect to the performance of his duties? If such right or duty of control exists, the doctrine applies; otherwise not. The right to employ and discharge the servant is an element tending to show a right of control, but is not conclusive or indispensably necessary; the ultimate test being the right or duty to control. Roe v. Winston, 86 Minn. 77, citing 20 AM. AND ENG. ENCYC. OF LAW (2d ed.) 178.

Liability of Corporation for Acts of Tenants. — It has been held that a corporation is not liable under the Arkansas statute (Sand. & H. Dig., § 4792) for the acts of its tenants in employing the servants of another before the expiration of their contracts where the corporation has no control over the tenants. Sunnyside Co. v. Read, 71 Ark. 59.

Evidence of Existence of Relation. — If a man is seen operating the machinery of a carrier, this fact, unexplained, is sufficient to justify the conclusion that he is acting as a servant of the carrier, if there is nothing in the manner or circumstances of the occurrence to negative the conclusion. Wilson v. Alexander, 115 Tenn. 125.

Georgia Statute. — An essential element of the offense defined in section 122 of the Georgia Penal Code is enticing, persuading, or decoying the servant of another to leave his employer during his term of service, and proof of such facts as establish that the accused did one of these things is essential to sustain a conviction of the offense therein defined. Hence a conviction under this section cannot lawfully stand where the evidence in this regard shows no more than that the servant left the place of his employment in company with the accused. *Broughton v. 186. 6. Laborer Defined. — It has been held that persons having contracts with a sugar manufacturing company to weigh and load cane on railroad cars for transportation and delivery to the refinery, the scale, derricks, and machinery used for weighing and loading being furnished by the company, the contractors operating them with laborers employed and paid by them, were independent contractors, and were not workmen and laborers employed in working the plantations of the company whose wages, under the laws of Louisiana, would have a special privilege on the crop. Fortier v. Delgado, (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. Rep. 604.

Bar tender. — It has been held that a bartender, whose duties are mainly manual, and who is also required to keep books as a part of his duties, is a laborer within the meaning of the law creating a lien in favor of laborers, for their labor, upon the property of their employers. Lowenstein v. Meyer, 114 Ga. 709.

15. Superintendent of Mill Not a Laborer. — Moore v. American Indust. Co., 138 N. Car. 304.

187. 6. Clerks, Secretaries, or Agents. — It has been held that persons having contracts with a sugar manufacturing company to weigh and load cane on railroad cars for transportation and delivery to the refinery, the scale, derricks and machinery used for weighing and loading being furnished by the company, the contractors operating them with laborers employed and paid by them, were not clerks, secretaries, or agents, whose salaries are privileged under the laws of Louisiana, as to both the moveables and immovables of the debtor. Fortier v. Delgado, (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. Rep. 604.

Under the Florida statute (Fla. Rev. Stat., § 1732), providing for liens in favor of bookkeepers, clerks, agents, porters, and other employees of merchants and transportation companies and other corporations, it has been held that a bookkeeper of a corporation conducting a saw-mill business, and another employee, whose duty it was to keep a record of the time of the employees and to attend to a commissary run in connection with such mill, and another employee, who was under contract to haul logs to the mill at the wages of five dollars per day, using his own team in so doing, were all entitled to a lien for their wages on the lumber produced by such mill. St. Augustine First Nat. Bank v. Kirkby, 43 Fla. 376.

188. 7. See Pugh v. Baker, 127 N. Car. 2.

14. Georgia Statute. — The general lien given to laborers by Civ. Code Ga., § 2792, upon all property of their employers, and the special lien on the products of their labor, given by Civ. Code Ga., § 2793, arise only for the work done. Hence when a contract between an employer and an employee provides for the labor of the latter as well as for the use of his property, the employee is entitled to a laborers lien only for the work done, and not for the hire of his property. Cox v. Cagle, 112 Ga. 157.

189. 4. Compare Sandberg v. Victor Gold, etc., Min. Co., 24 Utah 1.
